Acknowledgements

João, for his insurmountable support in all facets of the project. The Grimoire would not be where it is today without you.

Jessica, always the first to test out every release. Liz, Wei and so many others will not soon be forgotten.

Natalie, for her moral support and constant interest in the growth of the project, and for creating our official mascot.

And most of all: Thank you, for giving the Grimoire a chance.

Content Advisory

This book includes illustrations some readers may find disturbing or inappropriate. A few illustrations contain sparse, non-sexual depictions of partial nudity or sexual symbolism, religious symbolism from several mythologies and religions, and references to death and bodily harm.

Exercise caution if these subjects are uncomfortable to you.

PART I

INTRODUCTION

Preface

The silent night surrounds you on all sides. Your timid reflection stares you down, taken by an anxiety you wish you could disown. You stretch out your hand, resting it on the cold, smooth surface and your eyes close for just a moment. It's just an urban legend, of course. Internet jokes and mocking whispers in the classrooms. "The Metaverse", they claim, "it's the other side". You open your eyes, and before going back to bed, you are struck by the realization you couldn't have shared your reflection's smile and its glowing yellow eyes. Suddenly, you realize something is discreetly wrong about your room. Running to your window, staring towards the horizon, you hold back a scream. The familiar skyline is replaced by a cacophony of misplaced buildings and tilted ruins. At the center, a gigantic tower awaits, hundreds of stories tall, splitting the moonlight in two.

A familiar voice tears you from your incredulous trance. Your yellow-eyed reflection is laying across your bed, mocking your insecurities like a mantra, staring you down from the reflection of a bloodstained scythe. A wave of pain shoots through your skull and you fall to your knees clutching your head, certain of your fate. The "other you" leaps, ready to fall upon you with the repressed fury of an escaped prisoner. A moment before the blade takes your life, you feel the presence of another creature: Your guardian angel, the mask you wear to shield yourself from the chaotic everyday life, your personified determination splits the weapon with a mighty blow and throws your mocking reflection across the room with a single blow. The creature's smile is now yours, a single word escaping from your lips: "Persona!"

The rules presented in this book are partially based on the FATE system, adapted freely, and this book will contain all the necessary information to get you understanding and participating in a game. I t is not necessary to have previous experiences in RPG games or the Persona series to enjoy The Grimoire of the Heart to its fullest.

Games are usually set in an idealized version of Tokyo in the near or immediate future, based mostly on real locations used throughout the Shin Megami Tensei series. The main themes of the setting presented in this book are overcoming one's past and accepting great tragedies.

A few details in this book can contradict or complement information presented in the games and their supplemental content with no previous warning. It is the Narrator's duty to decide which part of the game's canon, this book's or their own stories' will be considered for each narrative.

The characters must be created by the players with the tonal themes presented by the Narrator kept in mind. A traumatic or major event in the character's life is usually required, but its circumstances, those involved and other details are left to the players' discretion. It's preferred, however not necessary, that your character's background be presented and discussed with your Narrator before the game begins to iron out any issues or inconsistencies.

Starting Personae are usually decided and designed by the Narrator, but players are encouraged to "call dibs" on Arcana they feel are appropriate to the character.

Basic Glossary

This is a list of generic terms used in several RPG systems that will be used extensively in this book and during game sessions.

- ❖ Narrator: Also known as Game Master or GM, the Narrator is the one responsible for organizing the plot, scenes, and coordinating the actions of Non-Player Characters (NPC)
- ❖ Character: Known in this book as a Persona User, a character is created and controlled by a player and is the main acting force of the game. Characters can die or be removed from the game by other reasons, and it's up to the player and Narrator to decide if the player will remain on the game with a new character.
- ❖ Character Sheet: A form where each player notes down all the relevant information regarding their character to be used during the game. You may choose to reveal or conceal any of its information to other players, but you must always allow the Narrator to check your sheet when required.
- ❖ Campaigns and Sessions: A campaign is a story arc, a complete plot as told by the Narrator and influenced by the players. A game session is the allotted time in the day where the party plays a part of the campaign.

Game Glossary

- ❖ User: A sentient being with the ability to summon Personae and accessing the Velvet Room.
- ❖ Persona: A generally humanoid form that represents the repressed side or the latent desires of a User. Personae can only manifest within the Metaverse.
- ❖ Metaverse: An alternate plane of reality created by thoughts and memories. The place where Shadows, Tyrants and Palaces exist within.
- ❖ Universe: Reality as we know it, the “real world”.
- ❖ Velvet Room: A room that exists adjacent to both Universe and Metaverse and that can only be accessed by Users. Its appearance changes between times, representing the difficulties to be overcome by those invited to it.
- ❖ Shadows: Repressed thoughts, traumatic memories and other negative experiences that gain form within the Metaverse: Shadows can represent mythological figures, urban legends or other beings shaped by the nature of the Metaverse.
- ❖ Tyrant: A particularly dangerous and powerful Shadow, created by negative memories focused on a specific person or event. Its existence alone can attract less powerful Shadows and distorts reality around itself, creating Palaces.
- ❖ Palaces: Labyrinths created by a Tyrant’s influence over both worlds. Palaces are intimately related to the nature of the memories that created the Tyrant and can contain internal blockades that can only be lifted by actions performed in the Universe that directly affect the Tyrant’s origin.

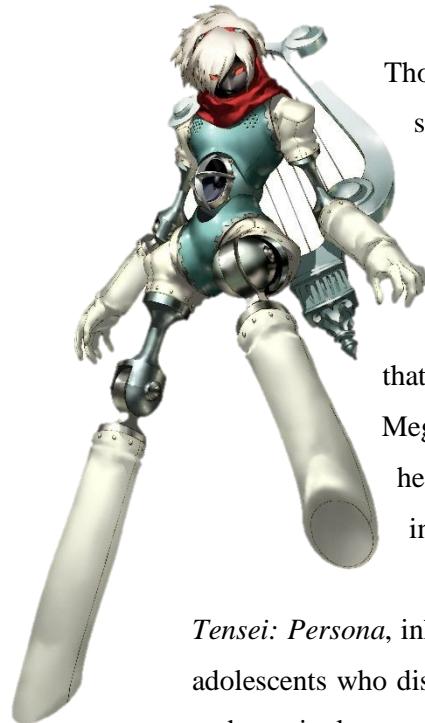

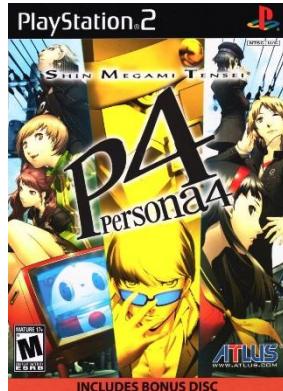

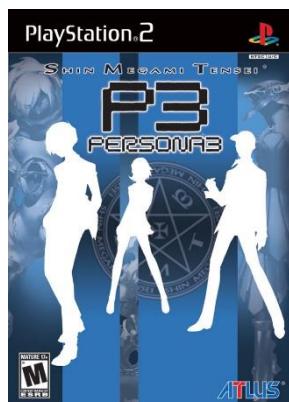

About the World of Persona

Those who are not familiarized with the Persona series may see this book with some strangeness. Alternate realities, psychology, literal inner demons? To an outsider, this may all be a bit intimidating and certainly unlike most RPGs, tabletop or otherwise, they've ever seen.

Persona is, first of all, part of something known as Megami Tensei, Japanese for “The Goddess’s Reincarnation”, a sprawling media franchise created in 1980 that includes books, manga, movies and videogames. Megami Tensei, also known as Megaten or SMT, is known for its striking visual identity, memorable characters and heavy themes surrounding unique tales of humanity’s struggle against its very nature in the past, present and future.

The Persona series, previously known as Revelations: Persona or Shin Megami Tensei: Persona, inherits the classic characteristics of the series and uses them to tell modern tales of adolescents who discover the alternate world created by human thoughts. These youths can summon and manipulate manifestations of their subconscious, the titular Persona, to fight Shadows, creatures who feed on human thoughts, while balancing their personal lives with investigations and conspiracies that often involve powerful people and world-threatening events.

This rulebook, formally known as Grimoire of the Heart or GH, seeks to capture the essence of the games: investigation, social interaction, exploration and combat flowing seamlessly between each other, setting the stage for stories of companionship, camaraderie, sacrifice and self-improvement that can be light and inspiring just as easily as they are somber and tragic. You don’t need to have played any entries of the Persona series to enjoy a GH campaign, although you’re encouraged to. You only need a story to tell, your very own drop in the sea of the unconscious.

PART II

THE WORLD

Personae and the Wild Card

“Thou art I... I am thou. From the sea of thy soul, I cometh.”

Creatures taking the most varied shapes, a Persona (plural Persona or Personae) is a mirror of its wielder's mind and its appearance is intimately linked to their subconscious.

In the depths of human hearts, shared amongst all people, there is a domain where mythological archetypes such as faeries, angels and historical figures inhabit and influence the development of human personality. Deities throughout history were likely borne from this, so it can be said that gods and demons do not dwell in heaven or hell, but rather in the hearts of humans, being depicted with the forms already created by the human subconscious. Personae can influence the physical and psychological capabilities of their Users, making them superhuman, for example, and giving them dominion over weapons and resistance to terror and madness. Those who can control a Persona, known as Users, have the singular power to engage and defeat Shadows and, with enough effort, can negotiate, threaten and form bonds with errant Shadows, obtaining priceless advantages.

A Persona's awakening inside one with the ability to summon and command them can depend upon several internal and external factors, but the most recurring way is under sudden danger or emotional distress. In most cases of a Persona awakening, the process proves physically and psychologically draining, with the recently-awakened User requiring a long period of rest, with some Users remaining bedridden for several days after the first summon. A Persona cannot manifest itself in the real world outside of extremely rare occasions, and can never affect anything outside the Metaverse besides its owner, and only other individuals with the Potential can see them.

On most observed cases, including the rare Shadow- and Suppressor-class Users, a being with the ability to summon a Persona can only invoke its personal Persona, known as the Starter Persona, and whatever evolved forms it might take. However, certain notable individuals can receive the power of the Wild Card, the ability to store several different Personae at once, being still limited to manifesting one Persona at a time. The cognitive ability of each User, known as their Potential, increases with the quantity and depth of the emotional bonds they create with the people around them.

Each Persona belongs to one of the 22 Major Arcana, numbered between 0 and XXI and, for all purposes, the User represents the Arcana of their Starter Persona.

Summoning

Making a Persona manifest itself and act upon the Metaverse can be done in several ways, generally associated to the affliction or trauma that caused the appearance of the User's Starting Persona. Mechanically, the player may choose any of the methods below in addition to any suggested by the Narrator or the player themselves. These methods are purely aesthetic and do not alter the characters' abilities. Summoning is visually obvious in all cases, creating a halo of blue energy around the Summoner and a noticeable gust of wind.

- ❖ Natural Method: The most common among the first Users and the least draining: The User holds out their hands and calls out for the Persona's name, focusing their minds on the desired action. Calling the spell's name and other actions is a purely aesthetic choice.
- ❖ Kagejikan (Dark Hour) Method: The method utilized by the Users during the Tatsumi Port Island events in 2009. It employs the use of an Evoker a pistol-shaped device developed by the Kirijo Group to simulate a gunshot towards the User's head. The strong notion of facing one's mortality brings forth a strong catharsis that facilitates the summoning process. The act of summoning using an Evoker is described as "liberating and relaxing". Users who opt for this method can still summon their Personae without an Evoker in extreme situations.
 - An Evoker is not a weapon. It cannot deal damage and can only summon the Persona of whoever pulls its trigger.
- ❖ Mayonaka (Midnight) Method: Employed by Inaba's Investigation Team, this method uses the cognitive nature of the Metaverse in the User's favor, materializing an ethereal card representing the User's Major Arcana. This card must be struck or destroyed, representing the User's desire to free themselves of the roles imposed by society upon them.
 - Mechanically, this "card" can be destroyed with any valid gesture and is completely intangible to any creature besides the User.
- ❖ "Phantom Thieves" Method: The extravagant summon ritual of Tokyo's legendary Phantom Thieves of Hearts. These Users' resolution granted them special outfits decorated with masks representing the façade they presented to others. Tearing off this mask represents exposing one's true personality to society's cognition, manifesting a Persona borne from a strong sense of rebellion. The first time a User summons their Persona using this method is particularly gruesome, since the mask is firmly stuck to one's face, causing plentiful, painful bleeding upon being torn off. Further invocations do not cause this effect.
 - The visuals of the outfit and mask are left to the player's discretion and reflect the User's Conviction. They're considered clothing that can be worn over or under armor, possibly visually overriding equipped items. These effects only apply as long as the User is inside the Metaverse.

Shadows, Palaces and the Metaverse

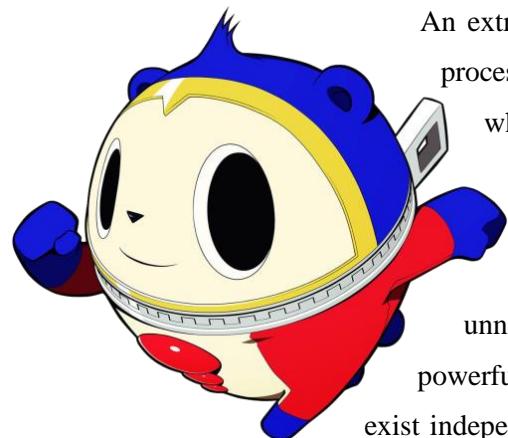

“The lowest part of the psyche that lives within all of us... Repressed thoughts gained physical form. When someone can't face their dark side, they gain life.

But sometimes, humans with a powerful will can tame Shadows... Turn them into Personae.”

Grotesque creatures of many shapes, Shadows are humanity's twisted mirror. Resentment, guilt, grief and other negative feelings inside a person can distort traumatic memories, creating a Shadow that initially has the form of a viscous mass of pure, tangible darkness, bearing a colored mask representing its Arcana. These Shadows feed on their owners' dark thoughts, gaining unique forms and, if strong enough, influencing their creators, piercing the veil between Universe and Metaverse. Evil humans who fall prey to the Shadows' influence become Tyrants, powerful and influential people, doing all they can to reap chaos and embolden the Shadows. A Tyrant's power upon the Metaverse creates a Palace.

Shadow Users

An extremely rare event can occur with certain Shadows. Through an unknown process, a Shadow can absorb human features and develop curiosity. A Shadow who questions its own existence and the world around itself can create memories and stand apart from the cognitive world that created it. This process can take much longer than the development of a natural human personality but, paradoxically, can also take little more than a few days. This unnatural growth makes the Shadow deny its own origin, causing a trauma powerful enough to birth a Persona making this Shadow, now a fully capable User, exist independently from the Metaverse. The birth of this fresh mind catches the attention of normal Shadows, putting Users in danger of being preyed upon. Shadows who go through this process usually have an appearance extremely different from the ones that Users are accustomed to facing, a façade created by the Shadow to more easily interact with humans. Once a Shadow User finds a way to access the Universe, they can transit freely between both realities. Outside the Metaverse, Shadows usually assume forms that make sense for beings in the “real” world, often unconsciously so.

Some Shadows gain human forms, while others can represent animals or humans with animal features. Physically, this form is indistinguishable from the creature the Shadow User mimics. When a Shadow takes a non-humanoid form, it can still freely communicate with Users, but beings without the Potential will only be able to hear whatever noises the creature would make, if any.

Shadow Selves

Users are often deeply flawed: They have regrets, resentment and moral lapses. These negative characteristics inevitably bring upon a special Shadow, known as one's Shadow Self. This Shadow is visually similar to a Tyrant's appearance in the Metaverse: A version of their originator with glowing yellow or red eyes. The biggest, and often only, desire of a Shadow Self is to overthrow their creator, devouring their mind and taking its place, controlling the User's body in the Universe. Some Shadow Selves possess grotesque shapes during combat situations, while others can wield a twisted version of the User's Persona.

Shadow Selves cannot be defeated through strength alone and do not have a particular vulnerability to a Locus as Tyrants do. Instead, Shadow Selves grow in power as they're rejected by their Users and inversely become weaker as the negativity that created them is accepted as part of the User's identity. Accepting one's Shadow Self, which may or may not include physically defeating them, can awaken a Persona in a character with the Potential or cause the evolution of the Starting Persona of a pre-established User.

The Geography of the Metaverse

The alternate plane of reality where Shadows dwell, to which Igor formally refers to as Metaverse, is, in most cases, equivalent from reality as represented by human memories of the real world's equivalent locations. Inversely, reality as we know and inhabit is known as Universe. The Metaverse is equivalent in appearance and physical laws to the Universe in most cases, but devices that depend on electricity or combustion do not work under any hypothesis. A region that garners strong memories in a large number of people will be tangible and detailed, while mundane or often ignored areas will be represented as blurry, indistinct shapes that are notably difficult to traverse. Some areas, influenced by strong feelings, can have different form or function from their "real" equivalents. A Tyrant's influence overrides the memories of a given area, creating a Palace with no Universe equivalent. On that note, not all Palaces are created by evil Tyrants. A good person that's perceived as evil or one who's unknowingly created dark memories without knowing it can create particularly powerful Tyrants.

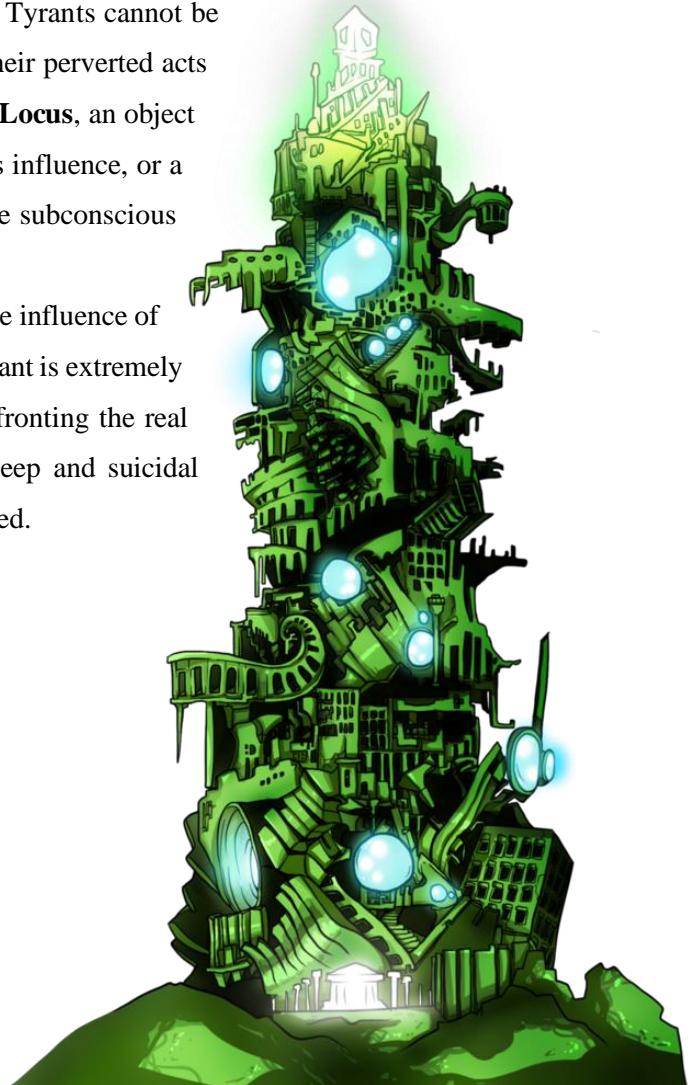

Physically separated from the Metaverse but still contained within it, there is an area known as the Mausoleum of Oblivion, an area that functions as the house of Shadows who are not strong enough to become Tyrants and have not fallen under their influence. This place takes the form of a garden and a cemetery growing inside a crater surrounded by an indestructible glass dome that allows Users to see a clear sky in permanent twilight. The Mausoleum and its open crypts are portals to picturesque and deadly areas that offer riches and powerful gear to those foolhardy enough to venture within. The way to access the Mausoleum of Oblivion, also known as Mementos, varies between each group of Users.

The Metaverse can only be accessed naturally by Persona Users or those with the Potential to summon them. Users can enter the Metaverse by focusing their minds on the memory that drove their Persona to awakening while facing their reflections on any surface large enough for a few seconds. The minimal size of an entryway to the Metaverse is around the size of a medium-sized television screen. The nature of the object does not matter, as it is possible to enter the Metaverse through still water, chromed metal or semi-transparent surfaces and objects. The process to return to the Universe is similar, requiring only that the User focus their attention to their real-world equivalent. A Tyrant's influence makes it so Users cannot freely return to the Universe from within Palaces, forcing them to look for areas where the Tyrant's cognition isn't as powerful to retreat.

Weaker Shadows can be undone by the passage of time and forgetting or overcoming trauma. More powerful Shadows can exist more independently, and can only be naturally undone by a powerful change of heart on their originator which usually forces the person to see reality and work towards solving the negative effects of the event. Tyrants, however, can endure even their creator's death, subsisting on the negative energy that still emanates from their evil deeds and those who suffer from it.

A forceful change of heart is done when any type of Shadow is defeated in combat by a Persona User. The negative feelings and the distortion attached to the memory are undone, allowing the afflicted person to see their past more clearly. Tyrants cannot be defeated so simply, as they must see the consequences of their perverted acts to have a genuine change of heart. This can be done with a Locus, an object or person of significance to the Tyrant or those suffering its influence, or a person who can give a genuine testimony that can reach the subconscious of the Tyrant's creator.

Defeating a Tyrant without the help of a Locus or the influence of a victim, or applying too much violence while facing the Tyrant is extremely dangerous. The emotional instability and the shock of confronting the real face of their acts can unleash a mental breakdown, a deep and suicidal depression usually followed by the brain death of the afflicted.

Researches on the Metaverse

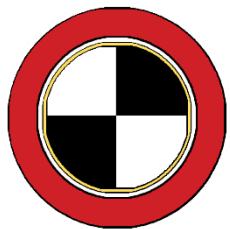

This section might contain spoilers for Persona 3 and Persona 5!
If you wish to avoid spoilers, feel free to skip to Part III – Character Creation

Several groups and organizations have relatively deep knowledge of the Metaverse and its origins, but these research projects are usually kept as a secret due to the dangerous implications and highly experimental nature of the experiments done within. While most researchers have interests purely scientific regarding the Metaverse, some groups wish to use this plane for more sinister ends.

Kirijo Group

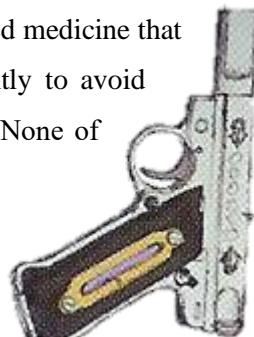

A multinational enterprise focused on scientific pursuits and the development of new technologies, the Kirijo Group's interest in all facets of the modern world means that practically all products commercialized in Japan in the present day have at least some features developed or improved upon by the Kirijo or one of its subsidiaries, making them a household name of worldly renown and a reference in quality and excellence.

In the 1990s, the Kirijo Group developed an interest in human cognition, becoming the first known humans to view the Metaverse. Unfortunately, the influence of some researchers on key projects of the research had catastrophic results: in 1999, an explosion in the Tatsumi Port Island Kirijo laboratories resulted in the birth of the Dark Hour, a time slot that manifested immediately after midnight of each day that forced all beings with the Potential into the Metaverse; and Tartarus, a gargantuan tower that contained almost all known Shadows at the time.

The Dark Hour could not be perceived to those without the Potential, who would be encased in large coffins for its duration. Some Shadows would escape Tartarus and lure humans out of their coffins, feeding on their minds and causing a psychological disturbance known as the Apathy Syndrome. Humans without the Potential who left the Dark Hour unscathed would lose all memories of the event.

The Kirijo Group is responsible for the creation of the Evokers, gun-shaped devices that facilitate the summoning of Personae by Users who find it difficult to awaken their Personae naturally. Besides that, the Kirijo discovered a method of forcing a Persona to develop within the minds of one hundred student-age humans to better understand the effects of the Dark Hour. Unfortunately, this process made the Personae extremely volatile, which made them capable of lethally wounding their Users. With the assistance of a pharmaceutics group, the Kirijo Group developed medicine that could alleviate these fatal episodes, but that should be administered constantly to avoid further harm, which would instead dramatically lower the patients' lifespan. None of those one hundred youths survived after the end of the Dark Hour in 2009.

Plumes of Twilight and Shadow Suppression Weapons

One of the most notable discoveries of the Kirijo Group revealed the existence of a material known as Plumes of Dusk. This substance, existing as something between the biological and inanimate, is actually composed of fragments of an extremely powerful being that appeared on Earth before life as we know it. The Plumes serve as a practically endless source of energy, but only skilled Kirijo scientists or extremely knowledgeable engineers are able to adapt devices to accept the Plumes as a source of energy. The size of a Plume of Dusk determines its potential energy output: Particularly large Plumes can substitute the combustion system of modern vehicles, for example. It's worth noting that Evokers also owe their functioning to minuscule Plumes installed in the firing mechanism.

After the disastrous experiments with Forced Users, the Kirijo Group developed intelligent androids known as Shadow Suppression Weapons, or SSW, also known as Suppressors, to explore the Metaverse and defeat the Shadows that encroached upon humanity.

The most incredible feature of the Plumes of Dusk was uncovered when they were used to fuel Suppressors: Plumes actively affected the AI modules of the androids. Installing two Plumes of the same size in a heart pattern, known as the Papillon Heart, over the Personality Module of a Suppressor would gift them with a complete psyche: morality, sentience and the ability to develop feelings and social abilities outside their programming.

The development of a complex personality allows Suppressors to develop their own Personae, easily summoning them with the Evoker built into their bodies.

The Conspiracy

An influential and mysterious group that gained notoriety in 2016. Headed by politicians and powerful researchers connected to the criminal underworld with the ability to influence most areas of Japan, the group gained knowledge of the Metaverse at the turn of the century, but only recently discovered how to access it. Its power grew significantly when one of their members awakened their Persona, becoming a hired “killer” who would seek out the Shadows of the Conspiracy’s enemies and killing them, triggering mental breakdowns at will on political targets or possible hindrances to their pursuits. The group lost most of its resources and influence, including the life of their User killer, due to the actions of a group of Users known as the Phantom Thieves of Hearts.

Individual Researchers and Figures of Interest

Few independent scientists decide to follow the field of studies related to human cognition and their materialization in the Metaverse; their projects repeatedly rejected or negatively reviewed by academia, discouraging those without a steel will. Only a few notable researchers and other persons have any registered interest in the Metaverse:

❖ Wakaba Isshiki: A genius-level researcher who focused her studies over the cognitive world created by the way each person perceives the world, which she called Cognitive Pscience, a fusion of Psyche and Science. Her life was tragically cut short by the Conspiracy's hired gun, as her research could reveal the criminal methods of their members. The Conspiracy forged a suicide note for Wakaba and stole her research, a fact that was only revealed by the Phantom Thieves two years after her death. Wakaba was survived by Futaba Sakura, a Persona User who was instrumental to the downfall of her mother's killers.

❖ Chairman Shuji Ikutsuki: Chief Director of the Gekkoukan

Academy and President of the Specialized Extracurricular Execution Squad, Ikutsuki was known by his penchant for bad jokes but otherwise impeccable manner. His polite façade faltered once Ikutsuki, unable to summon a Persona but trained to enter the Metaverse, revealed his plan to bring upon “The Fall”, an apocalyptic event where the creature known as Nyx would touch down on Earth, bringing the end of all forms of life in the planet. Besides that, Ikutsuki was responsible for leading the research of Artificial Users, having part in the catastrophic event that brought the Metaverse closer to the Universe. Ikutsuki was shot and considered dead in Tartarus in November 4th, 2009.

❖ Claire Blankenheim: Daughter of the doctor who created the medicine administered to the teenagers experimented upon by the Kirijo Group, Claire focused her studies in psychology and Cognitive Pscience after having the nature of the Metaverse revealed to her by a group of Users in her own home. A reformed Tyrant who once threatened to induce a coma-like sleep upon a large sum of the Japanese elite, Claire has since allied herself to the Kirijo Group in developing a machine that allows humans without the Potential to interact with the Metaverse. The first version of this device, a dome of glass and electronics similar to a sensory deprivation chamber, allows the user to view an area of the Metaverse around themselves for a few minutes. Finally, Claire, in association with a famous international R&D conglomerate called Ikari Mechatronic Solutions, is leading the first sketches in developing a new and improved generation of Shadow Suppression Weapons.

PART III

CHARACTER CREATION

Quick Start Guide

If possible, print out a copy of the following sheet and write on it with a non-permanent tool, since most info in it might change drastically during the game.

- ❖ Fill out your Identification fields: Character, Level, Arcana, Player and Class.
- ❖ Distribute 18 points among your Combat Skill:
 - The minimum value for each Combat Skill is 1;
 - The maximum starting value for each Combat Skill is 5;
 - Calculate your Hit Points: $HP = 25 + ((5 + VIT) * CLv.)$
 - $CLv.$ is your current Character Level;
 - VIT is your full Vitality score;
 - Calculate your Energy: $VIT + (CLv. / 2)$;
- ❖ Distribute 7 points among your Social Skills
 - Investing at least 5 points in one Social Skill will grant you a unique perk (See Page 30)
- ❖ Note down your starting RP, 5, and buy weapons, armor, accessories and consumables;
- ❖ Choose four Free Aspects and write them down;
 - Fill out your Persona's Name, Arcana (Pg. 35), Conviction (Pg. 34) and Natural Skill;
 - You can choose a Natural Skill from the Bestiary, or discuss a unique one with your Narrator. Natural Skills from Ultimate Personas, Tyrants and Users cannot be chosen
 - Choose up to three Types for your Persona (see the next page) and write them down. Emergent Users can pick up to four Types;
 - Types govern which spells your Persona can learn, so choose carefully;
 - You can choose less Types than the maximum. If you do, your Persona starts one level above the starting level per Type slots left unfilled;
 - If that would make your Persona reach Level 3 or higher, choose an adequate bonus (more in the Gaining Levels section, at Page 48);

Mark one of your Types' Icons with Resist, then choose any other Type and fill it with Weak to denote your Interactions. You take half damage from attacks of a Type you Resist, and double damage from Types you're Weak against, amongst other effects (See Page 41); Your Persona can have no interactions either way, either by your choice or if you have no valid Types to apply as your Resistance.

Pick spells from your Persona's Types' lists, subtracting their cost from your starting pool of six Spell Points. You can also pick spells from the Almighty, Defense and Miscellaneous lists; You can buy more copies of the same spell to use them for longer without needing to spend Energy;

The Sea of Souls, official Grimoire supplements, also include new Classes, such as Velvet Room Attendants, SMT V's Nahobino and Artificial Users, new Feats, Gear, Consumables, Shadows and more.

However, make sure your Narrator allows Sea of Souls content before using them.

Remember, all divisions in the Grimoire are rounded down unless noted otherwise.

Aspects are explained at length in Page 44

Types

Types can be divided in three general categories: Damage, Support and Control. These are the Types that can be chosen by Users. The remaining Types (Defense, Miscellaneous) have spells that can be chosen by all Users, regardless of Type choices.

Damage Types

- ❖  Physical: Spells focused on the User's Strength for big damage and special effects.
- ❖  Fire: A destructive damage Type focused on intense area damage, for the cost of lowered single-target damage.
- ❖  Ice: A damage Type able to crush and freeze single targets with impressive damage.
- ❖  Wind: Wind Type spells allow the User to choose between better to-hit odds or improved Critical Hits, offering unique flexibility and solid range.
- ❖  Thunder: Thunder is centered around the Shocked Status effect, which opens up targets for massive focused damage as it stops them from dodging.
- ❖  Nuclear: This Type offers grants the caster a unique Nuclear Buildup meter that can be used to unleash battlefield effects or be concentrated into a violent explosion.
- ❖  Psychokinesis: Usually referred to as PSY, Psychokinesis spells carry the unique Ingrain mechanic, able to transform Status effects into much deadlier versions.
- ❖  Light: Basic Light spells have high damage against high-HP targets, while the Zenith spells offer beneficial area effects and extra utility when its spells are cast.
- ❖  Dark: Dark spells carry the powerful Death Category, being able to immediately slay weakened targets, or stack up powerful Curses that trigger during the target's turn.
- ❖  Almighty: Deliver powerful, multi-turn spells that ignore enemy resistances.

Support Types

- ❖  Buff: Bolsters allies and temporarily raises your own Skills.
- ❖  Debuff: Weaken enemies and exploit their weaknesses.
- ❖  Heal: Restore HP, heal Status and bring allies back from the brink of death.

Control Types

- ❖  Status: Apply crippling effects, such as Poison and Fear, which can limit enemy effectiveness and, in some cases, grant your allies powerful boons.
- ❖  Intel: Scan enemies and control the battlefield with unmatched flexibility.

The diagram consists of six vertical bars arranged in two columns of three. The left column contains three white bars labeled 'KNOWLEDGE', 'DISCIPLINE', and 'EMPATHY' from top to bottom. The right column contains three pink bars labeled 'CHARM', 'EXPRESSION', and 'COURAGE' from top to bottom. The bars are positioned such that the top bar of one column aligns with the middle bar of the other column.

The image shows a 2x4 grid of eight icons, each enclosed in a black rectangular frame. The icons are: 1) A yellow lightning bolt. 2) A green swoosh-like symbol. 3) A purple circular pattern resembling a sun or a target. 4) A teal stylized leaf or fan. 5) A yellow and black circular pattern. 6) A red skull-like shape. 7) A purple abstract blob or liquid drop. 8) A green spiral or helix pattern.

User Classes

Each Persona user belongs to one of five Classes: Emergent, Wildcards, Shadows, Suppressors or Beacons. All of these Classes have the ability, or Potential, to summon Personae and accessing the Velvet Room and the Metaverse. Choose your Class carefully, as it cannot be changed by any means during the game. Note that some Classes may be unavailable to the specific story your Narrator plans on telling, so make sure your idea is legal to the game you plan on joining.

Emergent

“With my father’s death, I’ve lost the purpose of my life.

But now, I have found that purpose. Never again will I run away from my future!”

The most common class amongst modern Users, Emergents are limited in their flexibility, but can quickly improve their spells for devastating effect. Emergent Users possess a special bond with their Starter Persona, which makes it impossible for the User to tame wandering Shadows for their own use. However, Emergent Users possess the unique ability to absorb the fleeting energy of slain Shadows and using it to become stronger.

- ❖ Emergent Bond: Users belonging to this Class can normally only summon their Starter Persona and cannot acquire new Personae naturally;
- ❖ Focused Power: An Emergent User’s Starter Persona can have up to four Types at character creation, making them comparatively more versatile. If the player chooses to sacrifice three of those Types, a Starter Emergent Persona can start the game at Level 4, granting a head start to its User.
- ❖ Receptive Cognition: Once per combat, when an Emergent User deals the killing blow to a Shadow, the User’s Persona immediately gains Spell Points equal to half the User’s Level. A well-organized party can prioritize the growth of their Emergent Users and allow them the necessary killing blows to make them stronger.

Artificial Users

Not all Persona Users awaken naturally to their powers. Some people, after being subjected to life-threatening experiments and merciless stress in the Metaverse can be forced to awaken their Personae in an anti-natural manner. These Personae are unusually powerful but extremely aggressive, being capable of attacking their own Users with lethal intent and cripple them even outside the Metaverse. The only way to delay this gruesome end is through a powerful medication that slowly poisons the User, drastically decreasing their life expectancy. Finally, there are some dubious records of a unique human User bearing a Papillon Heart within his brain, becoming an Emergent User of unmatched power and cruelty who can wield two Personae...

Wildcards

“Time never waits. It delivers us all equally to the same fate.

You, who wishes to protect your fleeting future...

You'll be given one year. Go without falter, with your heart as your guide.”

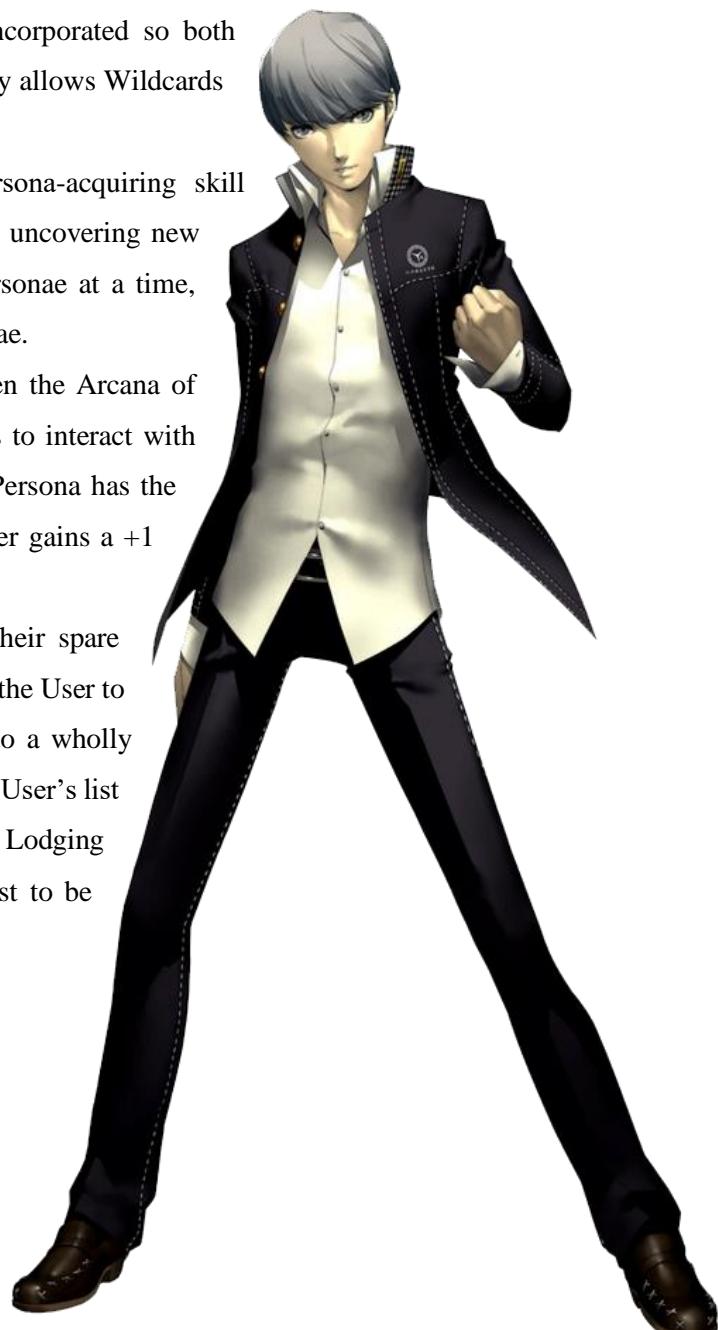

A peculiar Class, even amongst the rare subset of Persona Users, Wildcards carry particularly malleable psyches and a subtle difference in their Potential. For an example, one of the most notable modern Wildcards, Narukami Yuu, received his power directly from a divinity known as Izanami without his knowledge or consent. This difference in Potential is usually referred to as the “power of the wildcard.”

Wildcards possess the unique ability to carry several different Personae simultaneously, although they're still limited to manifesting one at a time. These Users can gain new Personae through negotiation with hostile Shadows, convincing them to return to their rightful place as drops in the ocean of human subconscious that must be accepted and incorporated so both Shadow and User can become whole. Finally, this ability allows Wildcards to take full use of the Velvet Room's facilities.

- ❖ Unmatched Versatility: The wildcard's Persona-acquiring skill means that they are under constant growth and uncovering new powers. A Wildcard can carry up to eight Personae at a time, including their Starter and any Secluded Personae.
- ❖ Social Butterfly: Being able to switch between the Arcana of several Personae makes it easier for Wildcards to interact with Shadows: If a Wildcard's currently equipped Persona has the same Arcana as the negotiation target, that User gains a +1 Social Skill Tier bonus for that negotiation.
- ❖ Special Guest: Users of this Class can use their spare Personae in Velvet Room rituals. Fusion allows the User to pick two different Personae and merge them into a wholly new form; Sacrifice removes a Persona from the User's list permanently to strengthen others; and Lodging temporarily removes the Persona from their list to be returned more resilient and versatile.

The Velvet Room rituals exclusive to Wildcards are available at Page 57

Shadows

“The distance between us doesn’t matter, our bonds will stay strong. And while our purpose is set to something we believe in, we’ll always have someone to help make it come true. Me, you, and everyone else... Our hearts are one. Right, Sensei?”

One of the rarest User Classes, but usually invaluable in their parties, Shadow Users are generated through an anomaly in the Metaverse: A normal Shadow, created by a strong memory, starts absorbing information on its surroundings and creating memories of its own. The volatile nature of the Metaverse, combined with the aggression Shadows display towards thinking minds and the incursion of human Users makes it so the Shadow quickly develops complex egos and memories that, when combined with the natural curiosity of thinking beings, brings forth a Persona’s Awakening.

Shadows can only wield their Starter Personae, much like Emergent Users. However, this does not affect their versatility as much: Upon gaining a character level, a Shadow User can copy spells and Natural Abilities to itself. Shadow Users also have finely honed senses while in the Metaverse and can take different forms in each plane, giving them unique utility and versatility.

- ❖ Cognitive Essence: Shadow Users have fields for Natural Abilities, Spell Points and spells independent from their Personae. These fields start empty and can be used even if the User can’t currently manifest their Personae.

- ❖ Moldable Minds: When a Shadow User gains a new level, they can copy the Natural Ability of any of the party’s Personae to itself.

Additionally, they gain 1 SP for themselves. This SP pool can be used to copy spells from other Personae’s decks. The Shadow User and the target Persona’s User must train together for around 15 minutes for the Shadow User to fully grasp the new technique. A Shadow User can only carry one Natural Ability at a time and must forget his current Ability to acquire a new one.

- ❖ True Form: Shadow Users can have two visually different forms: A humanoid form that manifests in the Universe and their true, idealized form that they can choose to manifest in the Metaverse. This change does not affect their stats in any way, but while in the Metaverse, Shadow Users gain the Explorer feat: Consider your Discipline Tier as 2 higher for searching and rummaging in the Metaverse, also the Narrator must treat your character as constantly, passively, searching for points of interest.

Suppressors

“You don’t need to save the world to find meaning in your life. Sometimes, all you need is something as simple as finding someone you like caring for.

I’ll live on, no matter what, so I can protect you.”

An elusive Class, considered by some little more than an urban legend, Suppressors, also known as ASW (Anti-Shadow Suppression Weapons), are humanoid war machines created to brave all incarnations of the Metaverse. Their appearance, threading the line between human and mechanical, can cause suspicion at first, but Suppressors possess complex personalities, generally gentle and selfless dispositions and egos almost indistinguishable from humans’. This is given, in part, due to a mysterious substance known as the Plumes of Dusk, installed in their cores (more in the Researches on the Metaverse section). Sophisticated intelligence and personalities, granted by state-of-the-art technology and infinitely complex engineering, are all but vital to maintain a body that can withstand the stress of summoning a Persona.

Suppressors are unable to naturally acquire new Personae outside their Starters and cannot gain extra SP as Emergent and Shadow Users. This lack of flexibility is balanced out by unmatched offense: Suppressors can raise their Combat Skills much faster than any other User Class. However, their mechanical nature is not without its flaws: Suppressors have a notably slower emotional growth when compared to similarly-minded humans.

- ❖ War Machine: Upon gaining a Character level, Suppressors can substitute one of their Social Skill gains to instead raise any of their Combat Skills by one. This grants a clear and quick boost in combat capabilities when compared with other Classes at the same level.
- ❖ Slow Learners: Most Suppressor Users find it difficult to sharpen their social abilities past a certain point. During any Activity that can raise your Social Skills, roll 1d8, minus your current Tier on that Social Skill. If the result is 1 or less, pay 1 Aspect Point or forfeit your Social Skill gain.

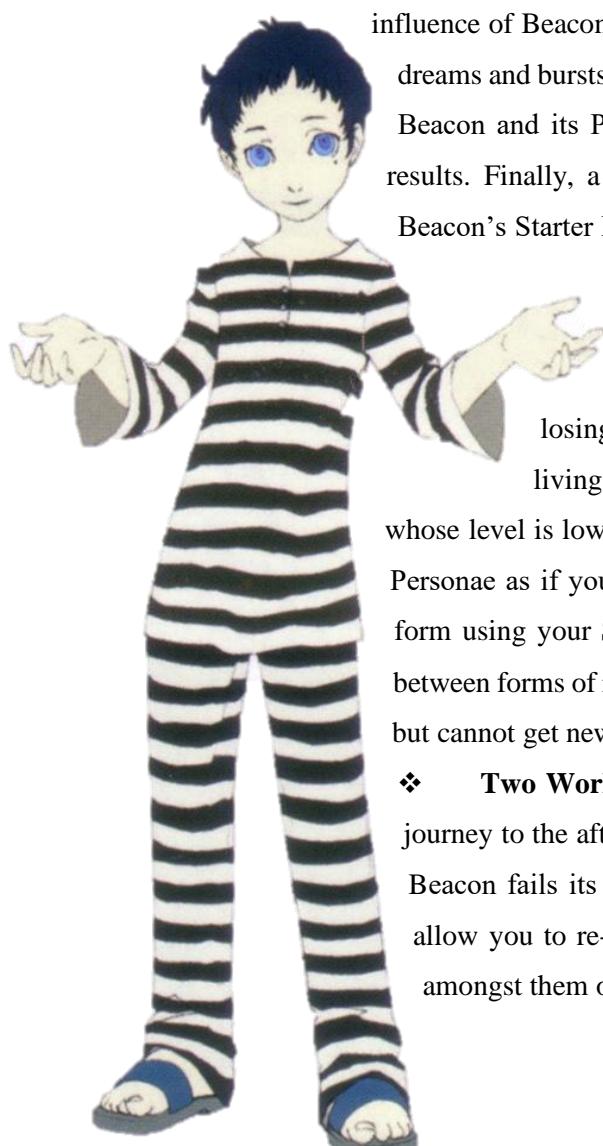

Beacons

“Somehow, this golden plume around your neck anchors you to the world of the living, the physical representation of the impression you left upon them. A day, a week, maybe even a decade. As long as your destiny does not catch up to you, you will know life once more. Just keep running.”

Death is the ultimate destination of all the living, the spoke of the wheel to which all existence is bound to. But the human essence lingers within the memories of those touched by one's actions: The fusion of thoughts on one who's departed, attached to a strong desire to remain, if only for a day, amongst the living, can create a being fundamentally different from human or Shadow. A Beacon's Conviction and the memories that brought it back to life materialize into a Plume of Coalescence, a golden, faintly shining object of extreme rarity and incalculable value that anchors the Beacon to the Universe and generally takes the form of an accessory or object of significance to the User. Most Beacons cannot gather enough memories to awaken their Plume of Coalescence and disappear within a week, a fate not unlike the one destined to those who lose their Plumes. Beacons with the Potential naturally leave a stronger indent into human consciousness, being able to survive for longer.

A Beacon's existence is a life both fragile and resplendent: Beacons cannot afford the luxury of falling victims to despair and their existence depends on new memories of them being created. The influence of Beacons over humans expands outside their own control as they appear in dreams and bursts of inspiration on more sensitive people, which can in turn affect the Beacon and its Persona's shapes depending on the nature of the influence and its results. Finally, a part of the Beacon craves for the freedom taken from itself: A Beacon's Starter Persona represents its Shadow Self, a negative representation of its User that wishes to free both from the shackles of the living.

❖ Malleable Existence: Each even character level you gain, starting at level 2, the Beacon discreetly changes form, gaining or losing features depending on the memories it's created amongst the living. Choose a non-Tyrant, non-Ultimate Shadow from the bestiary whose level is lower than or equal to your character level and add it to your roster of Personae as if you'd obtained it via negotiation and describe its form using your Starter Persona as a base. Beacons can switch between forms of its Persona under the same rulings as Wildcards, but cannot get new Personae through negotiation.

❖ Two Worlds: Even as your Shadow Self hungers for the conclusion of your journey to the afterlife, your allies can help secure your tenuous link to life. When a Beacon fails its Death's Door save, other Users can use their Interrupt actions to allow you to re-roll the save, celebrating your memory to reaffirm your presence amongst them once more.

Identification

- ❖ Character: Your character's name.
- ❖ Lv.: Your Character Level, also sometimes shortened as CLv. All Users start at Level 1, unless specified otherwise by your Narrator.
- ❖ Arcana: The number and name of the Major Arcana that represents your character.
- ❖ Class: Your User's Class, explained above.
- ❖ Player: The name of the player who will control this User.
- ❖ Damage Reduction: How much incoming damage can be mitigated by armor and magical effects when you're hit by an attack. The default value is zero for all Types.
- ❖ Aspec. Pts.: Your Aspect Points (explained ahead). Each character starts each session with four Aspect Points by default.
- ❖ Energy: the current and maximum amount of physical and psychological stress your body can withstand. More on Energy on Part VII – Combat.

Combat Skills

These are the primary skills used for combat and other measures of physical competency. Each character receives 18 points to distribute among their six Combat Skills, being unable to set any value below 1 or above 5 while creating a Level 1 character.

Hit Points (HP) represent the amount of damage you may receive before being knocked unconscious or dying. HP is a derived value that cannot be directly invested into. Temporary changes to your VIT, such as Persona bonuses and equipment effects, increase your maximum Life Points, but not your current value. If your maximum HP ever falls below your current HP, lower your current HP accordingly.

- ❖ Strength (STR) increases the damage dealt by most basic attacks and Physical Type spells.
- ❖ Magic (MAG) increases the damage of magical attacks and some weapons.
- ❖ Technique (TEC) increases your chance of hitting most attacks. It can also increase the reach of some spells.
- ❖ Agility (AGI) increases your initiative, movement and chance of avoiding attacks.
- ❖ Vitality (VIT) increases your Life Points and Energy limits.
- ❖ Luck (LCK) increases your resistance to harmful Status effects, chance of dealing critical hits and grants an amount of Luck Charges equal to your LCK score at the start of each day. You can use Luck Charges to add a minor bonus to most rolls, among other effects (see Page 44 for more details).

In some parts of the Grimoire, you may find the shorthand SKL instead of STR or MAG. This means you can opt to use STR or MAG for that check whenever you roll.

Social Skills

These Skills do not apply directly to combat but determine your social aptitude and influence. Social Skills affect the benefits of extracurricular activities, your performance in work and school and several other factors related to the growth of your character and their interactions with the world. Upon creating a character, you receive 7 points to be distributed amongst six Social Skills. Most humans' Social Skills fall between Tiers 0 and II. Someone with Tier III or IV Social Skills is particularly sociable and influential, while Tier V is considered almost legendary.

- ❖ Knowledge  is your accumulated knowledge. It helps in school as a whole, as well as some professions. The observational powers granted by a good Knowledge score are useful in several situations, in and out of the Metaverse. The title for Tier 0 Knowledge is Slacker.
 - With Tier I Knowledge, your generous knowledge of mythology makes you Aware and grants you the following ability:
 - Once per day, you can reveal one Weakness from a Shadow you can see.
 - With a Tier II Knowledge, you are Learned, and can easily read your enemies' attacks:
 - Once per combat, when an enemy Shadow declares an attack against you that grants a dodge check, you may choose to gain +1 DDC against that attack.
 - Tier III Knowledge makes you Scholarly, and your tactical studies of historical battles give you a permanent bonus of +1 STR, +1 MAG or +1 TEC, your choice.
 - With the Encyclopedic Tier IV of Knowledge, once per day, you can cast a Tier III or lower spell without spending Energy or Repressing.
 - Tier V Knowledge makes you truly Erudite, making it so you can clearly see through the defenses of your foes. You gain a new Aspect based on your intelligence and gain access to the following ability:
 - Once per day, as a Quick action, you may gain the effects of Mind Charge or Power Charge.
- ❖ Discipline  measures your focus and dedication, your ability to stay focused on your objectives. Helps with checks that depend on concentration, working hard and can inspire respect amongst your peers. Tier 0 Discipline characters are often referred to as Bumbling.
 - With Tier I Discipline, your willpower grants you greater longevity in combat, conceding +10 HP and +1 Energy and the Decent title.
 - Tier II Discipline, Persistent, makes you understand the advantages of keeping your gear in top shape. All armor you wear grant an extra +2 DR.
 - Discipline Tier III, Thorough, allows you to break through your limits, granting you a bonus Feat.

- With Tier IV Discipline, you are considered Masterful, and the thrills of battle now work to your advantage. Once per combat, you can add half your Discipline Tier, rounded down, to tests that are not related to declaring attacks, summoning spells, or dodging.
- Reminiscent of its title, a Transcendent Tier V Discipline makes you practically impossible to stop. Once per day, when you enter Death's Door, you automatically return to life with 50% of your maximum Hit Points. This action is considered an Interrupt action, but it does not spend your round's Interrupt. You also gain an Aspect related to your resilience or willpower.
- ❖ Empathy  is the ability to comprehend another's emotional state. It assists in solving several social problems and is critical for objectives that require a well-coordinated team, or when you need to convince someone to share information in a friendlier manner. Tier 0 Empathy Users are often Indifferent.
 - With Tier I Empathy, although you are Inoffensive, your desire to help others allows you to shrug off your own problems:
 - Once per day, you can choose to automatically succeed on a roll to resist being inflicted with a Mind Status.
 - Tier II Empathy, Kindly, manifests your desire to do good.
 - Once per day, you can remove all Mind Status from any one ally who can hear you as a free action.
 - At Tier III Empathy, you are Generous, and unafraid to share your party's good fortune. Once per day, as your movement action, you can trigger one of the following effects:
 - Select one Combat Skill from one ally who's under a Buff category spell. You gain the same Bonus granted to that ally's Skill to your same skill until the end of your next turn.
 - Select one of your Combat Skills currently under a Buff category effect and one ally you can see. Apply the same Buff effect to their Skill for their next 2 rounds.
 - At Tier IV Empathy, your Selfless nature allows you to subtly manipulate the Metaverse to benefit your allies. Once per day, when you or an ally activates a non-Special consumable, you may roll a d4. If the result is a 3 or a 4, the item is not consumed, but the effects are applied normally.
 - Tier V Empathy makes you truly Saintly. Up to three times a day, when you or an ally casts a Cure category spell or uses an item that restores HP, you can grant this HP gain to another target you can see. You also gain an Aspect related to your Empathy.

❖ Charm  represents your charisma, personal magnetism, and style: details that draw others to you. It helps in a number of social situations, especially when dealing with strangers, during negotiations, and asking for favors. Tier 0 Charm characters are considered Plain.

- At Tier I Charm, you're Existential and once per day you can cast Pulinpa (Page 131).
- Tier II Charm makes you Confident and once per day you can cast Dekaja (Page 124).
- You are considered Suave at Charm Tier III and once per day you can cast Marin Karin (Page 131). You can use twice your Charm Tier instead of TEC for this spell.
- You're definitely Popular at Tier IV Charm and once per day, you can change the target of any enemy attack to another target as an Interrupt action.
- Few can consider themselves truly Debonair, and at Tier V Charm, you gain an Aspect related to your personal magnetism and, once per Time block, you may use your Charm Tier +2 instead of your Expression or Empathy for one check.

❖ Expression  is your ability to eloquently express yourself in speech, writing or art. It helps in presentations and dissertations, being especially useful for musicians. In other situations, it can help you make a compelling argument and, along with Charm, is essential for those in places of leadership. Tier 0 Expression characters are often Monotone.

- Tier I Expression is still considered Rough, but once per day, as your movement action, you can choose one target. Until the end of the battle, allies who attack this target can attempt a Critical hit without spending Luck Charges, once per ally.
- Eloquent Tier II Expression characters can guide your allies and help keep their focus.
 - Once per day, as a Quick action, you can increase the Dodge Dice Category of all your allies by 1 until the end of your next turn.
- At Tier III, your Inspiring Expression allows you to dish out a hell of a catchphrase.
 - Once per day, as a Quick action, you can attempt to cause Enrage in all units within 12 meters. For enemies, this chance is $25+4*(\text{Expression Tier})\%$. Allies can opt to fail the dodge roll against this action.
- With the Touching Expression granted by achieving Tier IV, you're no stranger to coordinating your party members.
 - Once per day, as your attack action, you can choose one target. For the next two rounds, this target gains Critical Margin -2 for attacks it declares and attacks declared against this target cannot miss.
- Your Enthralling Tier V Expression grants a peerless, unmistakable twist to your tactics. Once per day, you can use your attack action to give one extra movement action to each of your allies. You gain an Aspect related to your leadership skills.

❖ Courage ✨  is your ability to ignore fear. In daily life, it may help you with presentations and performances, and can help you make the most out of your Expression to present your ideas. Timid Tier 0 Courage Users would likely benefit from improving their Courage.

- Tier I Courage is still somewhat Ordinary, but you can still benefit from rushing headfirst into danger, risks be damned. Once per day, when you declare an attack, you can choose to add your DR value to damage calculation, but reduce your DR to 0 until the end of your next turn.
- Your Determined Tier II Courage allows you to laugh in the face of certain doom. When you're targeted by a Status category spell, you can choose to fail the Status dodge check to apply the same Status effect on the caster.
- Tier III Courage makes you Staunch, helping you realize that true victory only comes to the hardiest, fastest... Or luckiest. You can choose to gain a permanent bonus of +1 VIT, +1 AGI or +2 LCK.
- Tier IV Courage is reserved to the Dauntless, those who can shrug off even the mightiest blows. When you take damage of the Physical, Fire, Ice, Thunder, Wind, PSY or Nuclear Type, you can trigger the following effect as your Interrupt action:
 - You gain Fortify 1d10 against the Type of damage you received. This stacks with other Buff effects. This bonus lasts until the end of combat, or until you choose to trigger this effect again, which overrides any previous uses.
- Are you enough of a Badass to achieve Tier V Courage? If so, your drive must burn brighter than any fire. Once per day, you can activate the following effect as a free action:
 - You take no penalties for exceeding your Energy threshold until the start of your next turn. At the start of your next turn, pay 1 Aspect Point to extend this effect for another round. If you cannot pay for this extension, the effect ends and you take Almighty damage equal to your Energy value below 0, multiplied by 10. If combat ends while you're under the effect of this perk, the effect ends and whatever damage you would take from this perk cannot lower your HP to below 1.

Aspects

Aspects are descriptions that define parts of the game such as characters, places, objects and others. If it's important to the world or the plot, it'll have at least one Aspect, but let's focus on Character Aspects for now. Each character starts each session with four Aspect Points that can be used to call upon your Aspects to alter the narrative, helping or hindering the party. When creating your character, think about Aspects that describe your character's personality, backstory, interests and quirks, descriptions that can be used to affect the narrative in creative and engaging ways. This usually takes some time, so take your time and don't worry about making your Aspects overly useful or situational.

Aspects, and how to use them, are explained in further detail in Page 43

Each player character is created with four Aspects chosen by the player, and a Conviction, an Aspect that describes what caused their Persona to awaken.

Example: Yuma Kaoru, a Suppressor-Class User representing the Sun Arcana, who was created by the Kirijo Group, but was only recently reactivated from a deep slumber. His Aspects are as follows:

- ❖ Conviction: “This is my duty, and I will not fail”: Yuma has a strong sense of justice and a profound mistrust of any Shadows. He can call upon this Aspect to resist fear and encourage his allies, but his uneasiness around Shadows can cause some attrition with Shadow Class Users
- ❖ Free Aspect: “A Heart of Gold (and several other precious metals)”: As a representative of the Sun Arcana, Yuma is carefree and cheerful, always eager to help those in need. However, he can also come off as naïve and too quick to trust.
- ❖ Free Aspect: “Human After All”: Yuma was quick to integrate into human society, learning mannerisms and emotions with surprising ease. This Aspect can help him disguise his mechanical nature to anyone but the most discerning.
- ❖ Free Aspect: “Honorary Scientist”: Once awake, Yuma was “raised” and taught by scientists of all kinds, many curious to have first-hand experience with a Suppressor android. He picked up a lot of small, diverse tidbits of knowledge during his time in observation, but his surface-level knowledge will often fail him in more advanced problems.
- ❖ Free Aspect: “Out of Time”: Yuma was deactivated for almost two decades, being awakened in a world much different from the one he knew. Aspects of modern culture often escape him and he prefers turn-of-the-century technology over current devices.

Arcana

Arcana are the different cards of the traditional tarot deck that represent positive and negative facets of human personality and events past, present and future. Each player character and Confidant represent an Arcana, described below. Some Arcana have a Reverse Arcana, a corrupted version of the card's usual depiction, usually reserved for Tyrants and antagonists, while others have Prismatic Arcana, cards with a similar meaning to the original, but with a greater intensity. The traumatic event in the characters' backstories is usually referenced in their Arcana. For example, if a character represents the Empress Arcana, their event may be related to infertility, lack of beauty, overdependence or similar themes. Note that player characters cannot represent The World Arcana or any of the Prismatic and Reverse Arcana, as these are reserved for the Narrator to assign to major events in their stories.

Arcana Spread

At the start of each session, the Major Arcana available to the party are to be displayed and made available. For the cost of one Aspect Point, any of these Arcana can be activated by any player to grant the relevant effect to the party. Once the card is activated, it can no longer be invoked for the rest of the current session. Activating an Arcana is considered an Interrupt action that does not spend your Interrupt action for this round.

Each Major Arcana has a combat effect and an out-of-combat effect. The World Arcana is special: it is reserved for special events in the campaign and its effects are to be determined by the Narrator to fit their particular narrative.

Meaning and Effects

Arcana	Meaning	Combat Effect	Out of Combat Effect
 0 The Fool	Beginnings Spontaneity Empathy Innocence	Activate this Arcana during the initiative roll. You automatically become the first character in the queue and all your allies receive +10 initiative for this combat.	Add 1d4 to any Social Skill of any User until the end of the current Scene.  The Joker
 1 The Magician	Power Skill Concentration Action	You gain Null Status for the duration of the combat.	You can use your Discipline Tier value instead of any one other Social Skill's Tier for the duration of the Scene.

Persona

Your Persona is a representation of your psyche, your “true self” or, in some cases, the façade you expose to the world. The Persona series has hundreds of unique and fascinating designs for Personae, but it’s always preferred that the Narrator and the player work together to develop a unique design to the Starter Persona of each player character.

Creating a Persona

Personae are, in general, based on mythological figures (Zeus, Anubis, Amaterasu, for example), historical figures such as Julius Caesar, and even modern myths such as Mothman, Cthulhu and the Hell Biker. Choose a figure whose stories are reminiscent of the unique backstory of your User, research depictions of this figure throughout history and develop an appearance using the themes presented by the character and the User, implementing the character Types in a way that’s natural and interesting. A campaign set in the modern world or near future will be much more aesthetically appealing if the Personae are inspired by the art and architecture the players are immersed into, so keep the setting in mind. You don’t need to draw the Persona, necessarily, but try to create a comprehensive text description that can be shown and explained to other players during the campaign.

After creating your Persona’s form, focus on its function. Start with your Conviction: a sentence or expression that showcases the determination of the User, what drew them to the particular form of this Persona. After this, think of the Types of your Persona, which determines the spells it can learn, and create a Natural Ability to compliment your play style: A simple but unique power that your Persona can call upon if you have it as your active Persona, such as “All Physical attacks can be Realized”, for example, is a great, simple Natural Ability. If you have doubts or questions about designing your Persona, Conviction or Natural Ability, consult your Narrator. Personas don’t have Combat or Social Skills, always using their caster’s values.

Spells

Spells are powers, both active and passive, that your Persona may activate at your command. When you acquire a spell, you can use it once per day for no cost. You can buy more uses of the same spells to gain more free uses of it. If you run out of uses for any spell, you can cast it normally by reducing your Energy by an amount equal to the desired spell’s Tier. Passive spells are always active as long as the Persona is currently equipped, can only be acquired once and have no Energy cost unless specified otherwise.

Upon gaining a new level, a Persona gains points that can be spent buying new spells. Each Starter Persona starts off with six Spell Points (SP). A Persona can acquire spells from any of its Types, but also from the Almighty, Defense and Miscellaneous Types.

A Persona is able to know up to sixteen spells, including passive effects; if a seventeenth spell is learned, an older power must be forgotten. When a spell is forgotten, half the SP cost is refunded to the Persona (Half- and quarter-points are accounted for, not rounded). Forgetting a spell can be done whenever a Persona gains a level, even if the spell limit of that Persona is not reached.

If you need help coming up with a killer Persona design, consider checking Page 148

Types and Interactions

Every Persona and Shadow has a set of interactions with all Types:

- ❖ Weak: The ability deals double damage and has double the chance to trigger secondary effects;
- ❖ Neutral: Damage and effect chances are calculated normally;
- ❖ Resist: The ability deals half damage and secondary effects have half the chance to trigger;
- ❖ Null: The ability deals no damage and secondary effects will not trigger;
- ❖ Reflect: Damage and ability effects are dealt to the caster instead. If several attacks are reflected at once, the effects can be applied or rolled for several times. An ability can only be reflected once (if the caster also has Reflect against that Type, the spell fades, dealing no damage);
- ❖ Drain: The target recovers HP equal to the original damage of the ability. Abilities that don't deal damage are simply Nulled;

Resistances higher than Resist also grant immunity to secondary effects of affected spells. The Starter Persona of each User gains Resist to one of its Types and a Weakness, both to be chosen by the player from the following list: Physical, Fire, Ice, Wind, Thunder, Light, Dark or Intel. Personae cannot have interactions against Almighty, Buff, Debuff or Heal.

A subtype of the Physical Type is Gun. This subtype is used only to determine elemental interactions for Shadows and other NPC enemies and must be ignored if a Shadow is turned into a Persona. Firearms, bows, thrown daggers and some Physical Type spells deal Gun damage, considering the target's Gun interaction when valid, but are considered normal Physical attacks otherwise.

Intel Type is unique in some interactions: Resist Intel halves damage taken from Intel spells and the triggering chance of effects, when possible. Analysis Category spells cast at targets with Resist Intel cost double the normal number of Cognitive Counters. Weakness against Intel has the reverse effect, doubling the chance of negative effects, making the User deal half damage against illusory objects and decreasing the number of necessary Counters by 1 (minimum 1) to activate any Intel effects. Null and Reflect Intel work exactly like other Types. Treat Drain Intel as Null Intel.

PART IV

HOW TO PLAY

Dice, rolls and notation

Die used in RPG games are similar to regular dices, but with a different number of faces. The standard cubic die used in most games is known as a d6. A pyramid-shaped, 4-faces dice is called a d4, and so on. Rolling 1d6, for example, means rolling a six-sided die once. The number before the dice notation determines how many times the dice must be rolled. You can choose to roll the same dice several times, writing down each result, or rolling the correct amount of die all at once. Some dice roll results, known as checks, are influenced by information on your character sheet.

Example: Natalie decides her character will attack a creature using the Fatal End spell. The Narrator asks her to “roll to hit” or “check for hit”. Hitting a target is decided by rolling TECd6 and Natalie’s character has 3 points invested into TEC. Natalie rolls three six-sided die, getting the following results: 2, 4 and 3. Natalie tells the Narrator her result was 9. The Narrator concludes that the character has succeeded in hitting and asks her to “roll for damage”. Natalie’s attack deals STRd10+2 damage. Her character has 4 points of STR (Strength), so Natalie rolls four 10-sided die, getting the following numbers: 3, 5, 1 and 7, adding 2 to the result, dealing a total of 19 damage, and the battle continues on.

Using Skills and Risking

Combat and Social Skills are used in challenges given by the Narrator to overcome certain situations. These situations can include passing a test in school, helping a friend in a tough spot, solving a puzzle and running headfirst into certain danger, among many other possibilities.

A challenge has a target number chosen by the Narrator that represents the ability level required to overcome the objective at its most basic level. The more your Social Skill Tier, or Combat Skill Value (ignoring Buff effects) exceeds that number, the better your performance is for that challenge, and the reverse is true for failure. Of course, sometimes you can’t rely solely on your ability to overcome tough challenges. Sometimes you may need to solve problems in a hurry, or a simple success isn’t enough. In that case, you can opt for Risking, taking the chances for great success or spectacular failure. You can risk a d4 or a d6, your choice. Roll the dice once, adding the result to your roll, then once more, subtracting the second roll from your total check.

If you risk little or nothing against a mundane goal, you’ll generally gain a safe result – moderate success or discrete failure. Against a challenge that’s clearly above your skill level, you’ll have to incur a great risk just to barely succeed. On the other hand, if you feel like a challenge is below you, you may want to risk comfortably for overwhelming success at best or a simple victory at worst. If you’re nervous or in a hurry, it’s difficult to act consistently; in this event, you must always risk at least a d4. Particularly difficult circumstances can increase the minimum risk the player may choose.

Example 1: Elizabeth is in the student directory working on a fundraiser. With Charm Tier III and a convincing argument, she chooses to forego risking any die. As the Narrator had secretly set the difficulty to 2, Elizabeth manages to scrounge up a few extra bucks.

Example 2: Liz is feeling emboldened by her previous success and decides to visit a friendly store to find a generous sponsor. The Narrator covertly changes the difficulty of this check to 3. Liz feels like she could easily convince the manager to spare some change, but she decides to aim high, and risks a d6. She rolls a +5 and a -3, for a total of +2, adding that to her T3 Charm and bringing her result to 6, hitting double the target difficulty, giving an inspired speech and gaining a sponsor.

Example 3: Yasu is scheduled to be the first to present her History dissertation. She'd been fighting Shadows last night and had no time to finish her presentation, being forced to improvise against a difficulty score of 4. Unfortunately, Yasu is a terrible public speaker and is feeling pretty nervous. The Narrator decides Yasu needs to risk a d4, at least, with her Expression Tier II. She rolls a 1 and a 4, bringing her total result to -1. Yasu fumbles so completely that her rambling can't even be considered a presentation, and earns herself a visit to the counselor's office.

Difficulty

The table below is a rough guideline on the difficulty threshold of each check. The “Social” column denotes the difficulty of Social Skill checks, while the “Combat” Column describes the difficulty of Combat Skill checks.

Social	Combat	Description
0	0-1	A mundane task that could be accomplished by anyone in normal circumstances.
1	2-3	A simple, everyday task that most people would not struggle with
2	4-5	An uncommon task that can require focus and planning
3	6-7	A troublesome, higher-stakes challenge
4	8-9	A large obstacle that demands your full attention, and possible help from equally skilled peers
5	10-11	A major test of one's skills, completely out of reach to common folk
6+	12+	A fantastic undertaking that can only be accomplished by those with peerless skill and dedication.

Providing Support

Not all checks must be done by only one User. When a player wishes to do a Skill check, one character the original player can hear can contribute to the test. The assisting ally adds half of their relevant Social Skill Tier or Combat Skill, rounded down (Minimum 1) Keep in mind not all checks can be helped with, and some circumstances can make support provide lower bonuses.

Luck and Luck Charges

Sometimes, pure skill is simply not enough to achieve an ideal result, and that's where luck comes in. At the start of each day, each User gets an amount of Luck Charges equal to their Luck scores. When a Skill check is performed, Users may opt to spend any number of their Luck Charges to add +1 to the final result per Charge spent. You may choose to apply this effect before or after Risking.

At the start of each combat, Users gain temporary Luck Charges, also equal to their LCK scores. These charges stack with their current pool of Luck Charges, but all Luck Charges gained during combat disappear once combat ends.

Which Skills to Use

It is ultimately up to the Narrator and the Player to decide which Skills will be used in a check.

The Narrator may suggest a Skill check, but if the Player feels that another Skill would be more appropriate or useful, they should come to an agreement that makes more sense for the situation. The table below is a rough outline of which activities each Skill largely governs over and a few examples.

Skill	Usage
Strength	Tests of physical prowess: Lifting weights, grappling, moving and breaking objects.
Magic	Mental tasks that Knowledge might not cover: Appraising the function and value of strange objects, predicting the effects of one's actions, etc.
Technique	Tasks related to dexterity and touch: Aiming, predicting a target's trajectory, feeling subtle changes in texture and weight.
Agility	Physical prowess, but related to speed rather than raw strength: Dashing, dodging, climbing, hanging off ledges, swimming.
Vitality	For checks that pertain to resilience and toughness: Resisting physical pain, maintaining pace, ignoring one's own fatigue, etc.
Luck	Gambling, random guessing, checks that cannot be purely influenced by one's natural abilities.
Knowledge	A combination of “book smarts” and general understanding about the world: Remembering obscure details, knowing one's way around town, etc.
Discipline	For checks that depend on one's focus and concentration: Tracking a target, resisting distractions, sticking to a single task for extended periods of time.
Empathy	Understanding others' emotions and predicting their actions based off that: Negotiating, blackmail, etc.
Charm	Influencing strangers, maintaining your posture and elegance, gaining favors, and other checks that depend on personal magnetism and style.
Expression	Influences both eloquence and artistic pursuits: Finding the proper words in difficult situations, encouraging others, influencing a crowd, producing art, falsifying documents, etc.
Courage	Governs “guts”, your ability to hide or overcome fear, resist intimidation, perform feats others might not be able to and helping others, even if it means harm coming to you.

Aspects

As previously mentioned, Aspects are keywords that describe important parts of a character, setting or item. Mechanically, they're characteristics that can be used by players and the Narrator to change the direction of the story. Personal Aspects have been discussed previously. Additionally, other things can have Aspects as well.

Scene Aspects

As the name describes, they describe any given scene. Different from personal Aspects, there is no minimum or maximum number of scene Aspects. The only Aspect every Scene must have is the Time Aspect.

A Scene is defined by the Time block it takes up. Each day can be divided into six parts and 4 Time blocks: Morning, Lunch, Afternoon, After School, Evening and Night. Besides the time designator, there are four wide Aspect categories for scenes and sceneries:

More information on Time blocks, and how to best spend them, can be found at Part VI - Activities

- ❖ Ambiance: Light, climate, weather, etc. These Aspects represent the ability of those in the scene to perceive certain things. “Dark and Stormy” is an example of Ambiance Aspect.
- ❖ Mood: Aspects that describe the attitude of people in the scene. “High Energy Rally” is one example.
- ❖ Danger: Exactly what it says on the tin, conditions that can harm those in the scene. “On Fire” is a good example, and so is “Deadly Neurotoxin” and “Automatic Smashing Plate”.
- ❖ Scenery: Generic descriptor for other scene elements, such as “Pile of Boxes” and “History Classroom”.

Other Aspects

- ❖ Objects: Relevant objects to the plot, such as a Locus, can have Aspects. The sword that slayed the Jabberwock would have the “Vorpal Blade” Aspect. Don’t give Aspects to every other object to avoid unnecessary complications.
- ❖ People: NPCs generally have Aspects (planned or improvise). Using Aspects is a way to make NPCs useful and distinct. Certain NPCs have Arcana Aspects and are known as Confidants.

How Aspects Work

First, pick an Aspect relevant to the situation. Then, ask yourself how it's relevant, as this will determine if it's Invoked, to help the party, or Compelled, which would make matters more difficult.

Invoking

When you invoke an Aspect, you're attempting to directly affect the narrative in a manner that's both to your benefit and consistent with the Aspect chosen. Explain what you wish to affect with your Aspect and spend one Aspect Point to make it happen. If the Narrator thinks the desired effect is not reasonable, he may cancel it (meaning no Aspect Points are spent). In general, you may also use one Aspect Point to add +4 to an appropriate Skill check.

Example: The party arrives to a dark cave. They're trying to be careful and not fall into traps, but nobody has a light source in their inventories. Alice says: “Since I have the “Nerdy Packrat” Aspect, it makes sense that I would have a flashlight”. The narrator agrees to this logic and allows the player to spend one Aspect Point to invoke her Aspect. The party proceeds into the cave, flashlight in hand.

Example: The current Scene has the “A Dark, Stormy Night” Aspect. The party needs to escape the campus through the gym and avoid detection by the guards. Bob’s player says “It’s a dark, stormy night. I want to take advantage of that and say it’s much harder for the guards to see us.” The Narrator agrees and takes the Aspect Point. The party escapes, soaked to the bone.

Compelling

When an Aspect is compelled, you're forced to obey one of your Aspects in a way that would cause problems to you or your party. For it to be a valid compelling, things must be worse off for you and your party than it was before. The players and the Narrator can compel Aspects. When a compel happens, the Narrator, offers one Aspect Point to the compelled player. The player may follow their compulsion and take the Aspect Point, or pay one of their own Aspect Points to refuse the compulsion. Other players can also suggest compulsions to other players and themselves. Compulsions can escalate: If a player refuses a compulsion, the Narrator may offer 2 Aspect Points thus costing two Aspect Points to be refused. If the player does refuse, the Narrator can escalate a second time, but not further.

Example: Carol is really stressed trying to balance her studies and saving the world. Her advisor is an NPC with the Perfectionist Aspect. Carol’s player mentions this Aspect and how it would clash with her character’s grades failing. The Narrator agrees to it, gives Carol an Aspect Point and her character gets a long scolding from her advisor.

Example: The party is nearing the deadline to locate their target. Dan is trying to get some info with a cute waitress at the local coffee shop. Dan has the Can’t Resist a Pretty Face Aspect. The Narrator decides to complicate matters for the party, mentioning how pretty the waitress is and offering one Aspect Point for the compulsion. Dan’s player agrees and takes the Aspect Point, losing his focus due to the waitress and missing an essential opportunity to gain new info.

Gaining Levels

Your character and each of their Personae gain levels separately.

Character Levels (CLv.)

When a character gains a level, add up its new HP and do all of the following changes you qualify for:

- ❖ For all levels, add one point to a Social Skill and grant 1 level to any of your Personae.
- ❖ If your new level is odd, add another point to a Social Skill.
- ❖ If your new level is even, choose a Feat.

The bestiary starts on Page 164, but keep in mind you may not choose any Ultimate or Tyrant Shadows

➤ If your character is a Beacon, choose a Shadow from the bestiary whose level is equal to or lower than your current level and copy its Types, Natural Ability and Bonuses to a new Persona sheet. Acquire Spells for this Persona considering its total SP as its Level +1. Note that the new Persona does not keep its original Arcana

- ❖ If your new level is a multiple of 3, add a point to one of your Combat Skills. Don't forget to calculate your HP if you add Vitality!

For example, on Level 2 you gain one Social Skill point and one Feat. On Level 5, you gain two Social Skill Levels. On Level 6, you gain one Social Skill point, one Combat Skill point and a Feat.

The experience numbers listed below are accumulative, which means that once you've reached Level 2, you need 600 Experience Points to reach level 3, since you've already attained 300.

Level	Necessary Exp.	Social Skill	Combat Skill	Feat?
2	300	+1	+0	Yes
3	900	+2	+1	No
4	1800	+1	+0	Yes
5	3000	+2	+0	No
6	4500	+1	+1	Yes
7	6300	+2	+0	No
8	8400	+1	+0	Yes
9	10800	+2	+1	No
10	13500	+1	+0	Yes
11	16500	+2	+0	No
12	19800	+1	+1	Yes
13	23400	+2	+0	No
14	27300	+1	+0	Yes
15	31500	+2	+1	No
16	36000	+1	+0	Yes
17	40800	+2	+0	No
18	45900	+1	+1	Yes
19	51300	+2	+0	No
20	57000	+1	+0	Yes

Feats

Feats are special abilities that affect how characters interact with the world and their Personae.

Some Feats have special requirements and limitations.

Name	Effect	Req.	Additional
Shove	Upon hitting an enemy with a basic attack, you may choose to push them up to TEC/2 (min. 1) spaces away from you.		Can only be chosen once.
Open Mind	Gain an extra use of a spell of your choice, up to Tier III, from the spell deck of any of your Personae.
Long Way to Go	Raise your Energy limit by 2.
Skilled	Increase one Combat Skill by one point or increase one Social Skill by three points.
Reflection	You can rewrite one of your character's Aspects.
Emergency Funds	Once a week, you can pay one Aspect Point to gain 1 extra Resource Point that disappears if it's not used until the end of the session. Each time you acquire this Feat after the first time, increase RP gained by this Feat by 0.5		Character must have at least Tier I of the Social Skill that governs their profession.
Furious	You can, for no action cost, receive the effects of Enraged . You can opt to automatically succeed or fail all attempts to heal your Enraged Status.		Can only be chosen once.
Selfless Support	As a standard action, you can sacrifice up to 50% of your maximum HP to restore an ally's HP by the sacrificed amount, as long as the target has 0 or more HP.		Each extra rank of this Feat increases the amount of HP you can sacrifice by 10%
One in Spirit	Once per round, you can switch Personae as a Free action.		Can only be chosen once.
Powerful Aspect	Each rank increases the amount of Aspect Points you receive in the start of every session by 1.		Can only be chosen once every three levels.
Explorer	Consider your Discipline Tier as 2 higher to search, track or loot in the Metaverse; the Narrator will treat your character as constantly looking for secrets. You can re-roll any check related to searching for items or devices, once per check.		Can only be chosen once.
Joust	Upon hitting a target adjacent to your position with an attack that deals damage, you can choose to move to any unoccupied adjacent spot to that target for no action cost.		Can only be chosen once.
Sword Mastery	With a Sword weapon equipped, you gain +1 DDC against Physical Type attacks declared against you.		Can only be chosen once.
Glove Mastery	With a Glove weapon equipped, increase your Damage Reduction by your TEC score.		Can only be chosen once.
Polearm Mastery	When an enemy enters the range of your equipped Polearm, you can use an Interrupt action to declare a basic attack against that unit.		Can only be chosen once.
Whip Mastery	Every basic attack you declare with a Whip that hits the target has a 25% chance to cause Panicked on the target, but this Status is removed at the end of the target's turn.		Can only be chosen once.

Bow Mastery	Treat the upper range of any bow you have equipped as double its normal range. When declaring a basic attack with a bow, you can roll 1d6. If the result is equal to the distance between you and the target, deal MAG extra damage damage, and extra effects, are applied even if the attack misses.	Can only be chosen once.
Firearm Mastery	As a Free action, if you have a Firearm equipped, you can choose 1 target you can see: You gain +1 DDC against that target, as long as there's an object between you and that target.	Can only be chosen once.
Shield Mastery	With a Shield or Plate equipped, you can use your whole turn to adopt a defensive posture and gain Resist All until the start of your next turn.	Can only be chosen once.
Dagger Mastery	Attacks you roll with daggers have +1 upper Reach and deal +AGI damage of the same Type as the original damage.	Can only be chosen once.
Gladiator's Physicality	Whenever you declare a Physical spell that can apply a Status effect, you can choose to decrease the Status chance to 0% to gain a +2 STR bonus to damage calculation for this attack.	Can only be chosen once.
Fire Monk's Trance	Whenever you deal damage with a Fire Type spell, ignite the space occupied by the target(s) during damage calculation for the next 2 rounds. Ignited spaces deal MAG Fire damage against any Shadow that ends its turn on that space, or walks through it. Each Shadow can only take damage from an ignited space once per round, but can take damage from multiple individual ignited spaces per round. An ignited space cannot be re-ignited until its ignition effect wears off.	Can only be chosen once.
Ice Queen's Touch	Whenever you defeat an enemy using an Ice Type spell, choose 1 Buff effect currently active on you and extend its duration by 2 rounds.	Can only be chosen once.
Wind Knight's Charge	When you hit a target with a Wind Type spell, you can choose to subtract your hit roll from the target's dodge roll, note down this value and spend 1 Energy: As your Interrupt action you can choose to use the noted value as your hit roll to cast one Wind spell in your deck.	Can only be chosen once.
Thunder Lord's Grasp	You may spend 1 Energy whenever you cast a Thunder spell that has a Shocked chance. Roll to Shock the target before rolling to hit.	Can only be chosen once.
Nuclear Assassin's Shade	Increase your Buildup Counter limit by 2. You can choose to spend Buildup Counters equal to your VIT score to activate the same effect that would trigger if you were to exceed your Counter limit, but you don't reset your Counters if that feature is activated this way.	Can only be chosen once.
Psychokinetic Seer's Chaos	Whenever you Augment a Status effect, you can choose to roll 1d10 (re-roll if you roll a 10), and compare your result to the Augmented Status effects table (Page 105), apply the rolled Augmented Status instead. For this, consider the first Status on that list, Smitten, as a 1 result, Desperate as 2, etc.	Can only be chosen once.
Light Cleric's Vow	When you deal damage with a Light Type spell, you can spend 1 Energy to gain MAG or TEC (whichever is higher) Temporary Hit Points. This HP is added to your current HP pool, cannot be restored and is spent before natural HP. As long as you have Temporary HP granted by this Feat, you cannot activate this Feat again.	Can only be chosen once.

Dark Heretic's Ritual	Whenever you defeat a Shadow using a Dark Type spell, or damage dealt by this Feat defeats a Shaadow, deal TEC or MAG (whichever is highest) Dark damage to 1d4 targets you can see, no dodge check.	Can only be chosen once.
Almighty Vanguard	When you trigger a Critical hit using an Almighty Type spell, ignore all targets' dodge checks and consider your MAG as +2 for damage calculation. This is not considered a Buff effect, and stacks with Buff effects.	Can only be chosen once
Sharp Mind	You're always aware of your location in relation to places you know; you always have a somewhat accurate estimation of time and you can remember any event you've witnessed in the last seven days.	Can only be chosen once.
Merciless	You can re-roll one dice for any two dice whose rolls were 1 or 2, for all your hit and damage rolls, but you must use the second roll result.	Can only be chosen once.
Sentinel	When an adjacent enemy declares an attack aimed at one of your allies, you can roll an attack as your Interrupt. If you hit, you deal no damage or any secondary effect, but decrease your enemy's HDC by 1 for its next action.	Can only be chosen once.
Linguist	You know a reasonable number of languages in varied capacities, decided by the player. The Narrator can rule out any one language from your repertoire by paying you 1 Aspect Point.	Knowledge Tier I Can only be chosen once.
Prodigy	Once per day, during an Activity block, you can roll 1d6. If the result is 6, you gain 2 points towards the chosen Skill instead of 1.	Discipline Tier I
Observer	Gain 3 Empathy pts. If you can see the face of a person who speaks a language you understand, you can fully understand what they're saying without needing to hear them. Consider your Empathy Tier as +2 to determine the feelings of another person.	Empathy Tier I Can only be chosen once.
Charge	During your turn, if you perform a movement action before attacking, add TEC to your hit roll.	Courage Tier I Can only be chosen once.
Inspiring Leader	At the start of combat, you and all allies who can hear you gain (Your Charm Tier)d4 Temporary HP. These points can exceed the characters' maximum HP but cannot be recovered by any means after being spent and disappear at the end of combat if they're not used.	Charm Tier I Can only be chosen once. You can only receive one Temporary HP effect at a time from all sources.
Actor	Charm Tier +1 for mimicking or disguising. You can mimic masterfully, voices and animal sounds you've heard for at least a minute.	Expression Tier I Can only be chosen once.
Grapple	You can try to hold down an adjacent enemy. Roll STRd6 against target enemy's SKLd6. If you succeed, the target cannot move and can be dragged up to half your movement allowance as your movement action. Target may try to free itself once per turn as a free action, repeating the check above.	STR 4 Can only be chosen once. You cannot declare attacks while grappling.

Athlete	Calculate your movement allowance with STR instead of AGI. You have automatic success in rolls for climbing or scrambling up surfaces up to 1 meter taller than you.	STR 3	Can only be chosen once.
Durable	Once per Scene, you gain Resist to one Type of your choice that you have no interactions to, until the end of the Scene.	VIT 2	Can only be chosen once.
Defensive Duelist	Once per round, as your Interrupt, you may decrease the damage taken by an attack by TECd6. Decrease your Dodge Dice Category by 2 until the end of your next turn.	VIT 3	Can only be chosen once.
Eagle Eyes	Every time you use the Snipe equipment property, you can add 1d4 to your hit roll for each TEC point you sacrifice.	TEC 3	Can only be chosen once.
Gigantic Breath	All your spells with limited range gain +2 meters of reach. Skills that also hit adjacent enemies can now hit targets up to 2 meters away from the initial point of impact. (This value increases by 1 meter per extra rank)	TEC 4	Can only be chosen once every three levels.
Live to Serve	You can pay 1 Aspect Point upon casting a Heal spell to automatically use the maximum possible dice roll.	MAG 3	Can only be chosen once.
Elemental Adept	Upon casting a spell of the Fire, Ice, Thunder or Wind Type, you can switch the damage Type for any of the types listed above. Example: If your Persona possesses both Fire and Wind Types, you can cast Maragion as a Wind spell.	MAG 4	Can only be chosen once. Can only be activated if your active Persona possesses at least two of the Fire, Ice, Thunder and Wind Types.
Volatile	Spells you cast that specify more than one target can now hit one more target per rank.	MAG 4	Can only be chosen once every four levels after being chosen for the first time.
Miracle	Once per combat, if your HP is above 1 and you would take damage that would reduce your HP to zero or less, roll LCKd8. If any of your results are 5 or higher, reduce the damage taken so you stay alive with 1 HP.	LCK 3	Can only be chosen once.
Dead Aim	You gain 2 extra Luck Charges at the start of each combat, per rank.	LCK 4	Can only be chosen once every three levels.
Thine Own Self	You can change the Conviction of your Starter Persona	CLv. 4	Can only be chosen once every four levels.
Persevere	Each time you choose this Feat, pick one of your Personae and one of its Weaknesses. The selected Persona loses the selected Weakness.	CLv. 10	Can only be chosen once every 5 levels.
Steeled Resolve	Each time you choose this Feat, pick one of your Personae and a Type it has no interactions with. Your persona gains Resist against the chosen Type.	CLv. 10	Can only be chosen once every 4 levels.
Iron Will	Each time you choose this Feat, pick one of your Personae and a Type it Resists. Your Persona gains Null against the chosen Type.	CLv. 10	Can only be chosen once every 4 levels.
Unbreakable Spirit	Each time you choose this feat, pick one of your Personae and a Type it Nulls or Reflects. Sacrifice one use of any of spell in its deck to increase the chosen interaction: Null becomes Reflect and Reflect becomes Drain.	CLv. 10	Can only be chosen once every 4 levels.
Intrinsic	Add a new Aspect to your character.	CLv. 10	Can only be chosen twice: Once starting at level 10 and again at level 20.

Persona Levels (PLv.)

Whenever a Persona gains a level, it gains 1 SP, or Spell Point. SP is used to acquire new spells or more uses of already acquired spells. A spell's SP cost is equal to its Tier.

If you own one or more uses of a certain Spell, you can pay the SP difference between this spell and one of a higher Tier to “upgrade” to a new spell. The original and intended spells must have the exact same Categories, including the “Activation” category (Active, Passive or Held).

Example: Alice holds two uses of Agi and two spare Spell Points. When her Persona gains a level, she may choose one of the following:

- ❖ Remove 1 use of Agi (Tier I) from her deck and spend 1 Spell Point to gain 1 use of Agilao (Tier II);
- ❖ Remove 1 use of Agi (Tier I) from her deck and spend 2 Spell Points to gain 1 use of Agidyne (Tier III);
- ❖ Remove 2 uses of Agi (Tier I) from her deck and spend 2 Spell Points to gain 2 uses of Agilao (Tier II);

However, she cannot turn her Agi uses into Maragion uses under any circumstances as their categories (“Fire (A)” and “Fire, Total (A)”) do not match.

Additionally, whenever a Persona reaches a level that is a multiple of three (PLv. 3, 6, 9, etc.), you may choose one of the following bonuses:

- ❖ Add 1 use to any spell in your deck;
- ❖ +1 to any Combat Skill, as long as you keep this Persona as your Active Persona. Your highest Combat Skill bonus granted by this effect cannot be higher than the total amount of Skillls raised by this effect:
 - +1 STR is OK, while +2 STR is not OK on its own.
 - +1 STR and +1 VIT is OK, and so is +2 STR and +2 VIT. +3 STR and +2 VIT, however, is not.
- ❖ +4 points to any Social Skill for your character. You can choose this several times, but similar rules to Combat Skills apply:
 - In this case, +4 Knowledge and +4 Courage is OK, +8 Knowledge and +4 Courage is also OK, but +12 Knowledge and +4 Courage is not
- ❖ Copy any spell you know, Tier III or below, into a Spell Card.
 - Spell Cards allow you to teach a spell to another Persona or Shadow Class User, including others' Personae, ignoring their Type restrictions. Spell Cards can only be used once each and grant one use of its spell to its target.

Remember: Each Persona can only know up to sixteen spells. Upon learning a skill that would exceed that limit, the Persona must “forget” all uses of one of its previous spells and gain SP equivalent to half their cost (fractioned values are kept, never rounded).

PART V

VELVET ROOM

“Welcome... To the Velvet Room. ”

A sprawling hotel that, according to its creator, “exists between dream and reality, mind and matter” and can only be accessed by those with the Potential to summon Personae. Time within the Velvet Room does not flow as in the outside world. It does not matter how long Users remain within its domains, nothing but a few moments will have passed in the real world. The immaterial nature of the room makes it impossible to summon Personae or activate skills without the permission of its inhabitants. That having been said, combat can be initiated within the room, but its inhabitants may reveal a lethal tendency in such an event.

The Velvet Room can be freely accessed by those who own a special key, given by Igor or his assistants, by crossing a door in the real world after turning the key into the door’s keyhole. Note that the key will naturally fit any lock, but will not unlock locked doors. A person who wields the key can take others who also have the Potential, but not other people. Normal humans can still see those dwelling within the Velvet Room as pacific, inert bodies. It’s worth noting that the physical bodies of Users are still vulnerable as their minds wander the Room’s halls, so care is required to choose an adequate entry point.

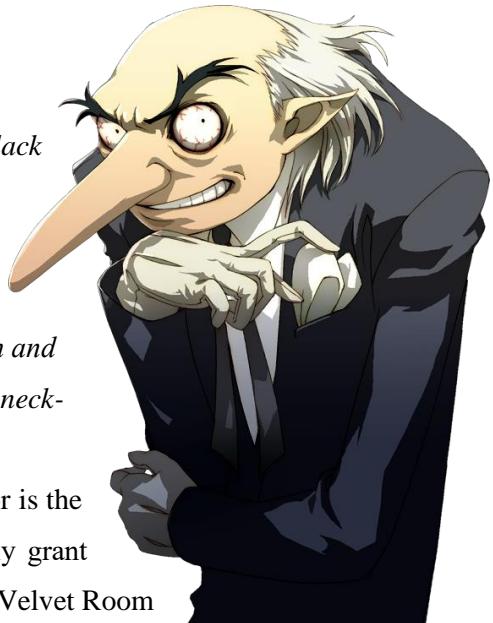

The Velvet Room’s visuals change on each of its iterations.

The Grimoire uses a hotel, but feel free to use a different version, or come up with your own.

Igor

A bizarre figure, hunched over and draped by an elegant black tuxedo and decorated with an impossibly long nose and bloodshot eyes, a tranquil and booming voice that betrays his unusual façade. His dark, messy eyebrows point decidedly diagonally, giving the man an irate mien. The top of the man’s head is smooth and hairless and the sides are decorated by a pair of pointy ears and neck-length silver hair.

A man of impacting appearance and incredible powers, Igor is the creator and “manager” of the Velvet Room. Igor does not directly grant powers to Users, but is responsible for keeping the functions of the Velvet Room working smoothly and grants power to its other inhabitants. Igor possesses a wide array of knowledge about the outside worlds and can be relied upon about the Users’ powers, Confidants and possible perils in their journeys.

Agatha

A tall woman of angled features and a slightly rounded nose. Her amber-colored eyes emanate a certain melancholy. Her voice is calm, measured, and somewhat cruel. Agatha wears a blue dress decorated with golden buttons. A messenger cap adorns her curly, silver hair.

Igor’s assistant and the woman responsible for cataloguing the Personae acquired by the party into a book known as Le Grimoire du Coeur, also known as the Persona Compendium, the enigmatic Agatha assists players with advice in exchange for small favors that can vary between the delivery of simple curios to investigations regarding Agatha's "siblings". Agatha is polite and almost unnaturally calm: A mix of naiveté about the dangers of the real world and pride upon her finely honed powers make Agatha a fearless assistant, which can prove itself a handful for those who accompany her in her forages into the outside world.

Nameless and Belladonna

Music within the Velvet Room is simply divine: a piano aria followed by a soothing, powerful vocal piece. The lack of spoken words gives the song a pleasant, universal appeal, giving you a feeling of belonging and safety to all its visitors. The pianist, a slender man wearing a suit without a tie and a blue blindfold firmly caresses the keys as his partner, an elegant lady with purple makeup and blue, silver-streaked hair, weave the melody they've named "Poem to Everyone's Souls".

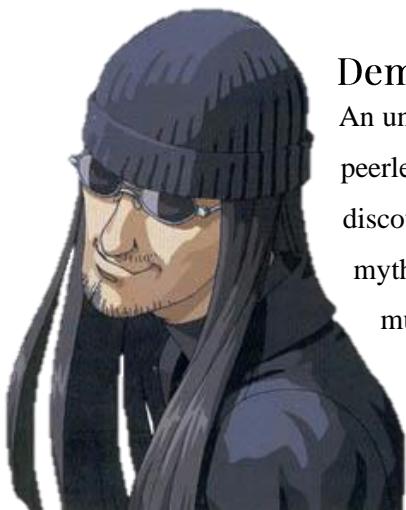

The man raises his face towards the Users: "It's been 8140 nights since our music first echoed through these halls, and each day we make it more beautiful". Belladonna smiles, using a break from the song to add: "My beloved warriors, I congratulate thee in fighting the monster known as one's self".

The mysterious Velvet Room musicians, created to give form and purpose to the tempestuous human subconscious. Nameless is fascinated with numbers, rhythm and measures, referencing them constantly. Belladonna speaks rhythmically and calculatedly, weaving speech and song. Both artists opt not to hear or see their own performances, sharpening their intuitions to a truly superhuman level. Nameless and Belladonna are friendly with all visitors and treat the assistants as their children, but are especially fascinated with musically inclined Users, often requesting duets and new songs to add to their repertoire.

Demon Painter

An uncommon inhabitant of the Velvet Room, the Painter was once a normal human with peerless artistic ability, often exalted as an artist above mere angels and demons. Upon discovering the Velvet Room, the Painter became fascinated with the origins of mythological figures, theorizing that if they truly are born of human perception, there must be something that inspires their depictions, using the experiences told by the Users for his research. The Demon Painter, despite his reputation, is an extremely humble and laid-back man, seeming almost aloof to the events unfolding around him.

Fusion, Sacrifice and Seclusion

The Velvet Room has three features that are exclusive to Wildcard Users due to their ability to carry several Personae simultaneously. Other Users who happen to acquire new Personae may also use these facilities.

Fusion

- ❖ Choose two of your Personae to perform Fusion. The resulting Persona will be of the specific Arcana (see the Fusion Results table, pg. 319) whose level is equal or lower than the average between the two source Personae, rounded down;
 - Your Starter Persona cannot be used for Fusion, due to the powerful Conviction and the bond shared with its User;
 - The resulting Persona cannot be of a higher level than the player performing Fusion;
- ❖ Choose a Persona of the proper Level and Arcana from the Fusion tables;
- ❖ The resulting Persona can inherit spells from the source Personae, ignoring the Type limitations of the inherited spells. To determine which spells can be inherited, consider half the level of the resulting Persona as SP that can only be used to acquire spells from the source Personae's decks. In this case, half-points are considered, not rounded or ignored. These points cannot be used to buy skills outside of the parent Personas' decks and disappears after the fusion is complete if not used.
- ❖ Write down the Personae's info, including the Natural Ability, Type interactions and whatever spells you choose from its Type(s);
- ❖ If your party has a connection with the Confidant of the same Arcana as the resulting Persona, each 10 Ranks of that Confidant grants +1 SP for it;

Example: Alice decides to use her Orobos (Hierophant, Level 5) and Tao Tie (Tower, Level 8) in Fusion. Orobos has Tarundamon, Tarukajamon and Mark of Slaughter, all Tier I, costing 1 SP each. Tao Tie has Megido, Seal Bomb and Null Panic as skills. Seal Bomb and Null Panic are Tier II, and Megido is Tier III. The resulting Persona will be of the Judgement Arcana, level 6. The possible results for this Fusion are Abaddon (Level 4) and Yamata-no-Orochi (Level 6). Alice chooses Abaddon and has 13 SP for purchasing spells of its Types, Physical and Intel: 6 SP by default, 3 for its levels above 1 and 3 more due to Alice's link to the Judgement Confidant. On top of that, Alice gains 2 SP (half of Abaddon's level) to buy skills from the source Personae's decks, being able to choose two Tier I spells or one Tier II spell. Alice chooses to inherit Seal Bomb. Finally, Alice chooses a +1 AGI bonus as Abaddon's Level 3 perk, and receives her new Persona.

Fusion Failure

Rarely, a Fusion event can fail. Every time Fusion is initiated, the Narrator must secretly roll 1d100. If the result is equal to the Level of the desired Persona, the player must roll 2d10, and the result of this roll will be the Arcana of the new resulting Persona. The chosen Persona will be picked randomly within the level allowance of the Fusion. Inherited spells will carry over to the new Persona, but Confidant bonuses are ignored. The player must choose spells and bonuses in accord of the new Persona's Type.

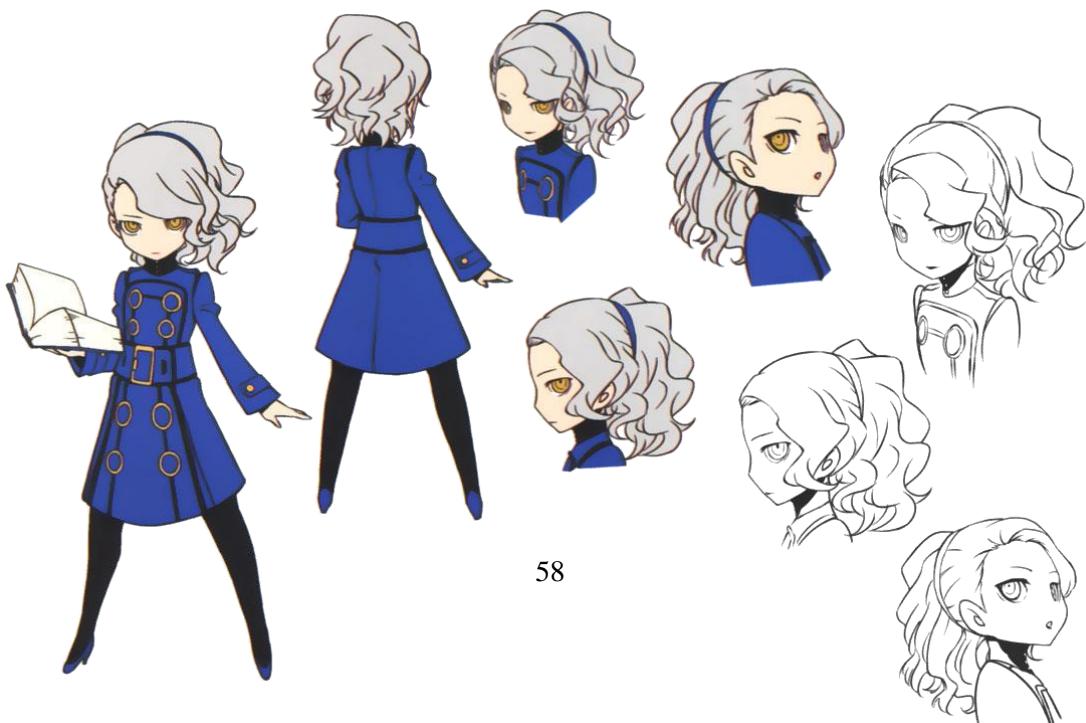

Sacrifice

Agatha and other Velvet Room attendants can Sacrifice Personae, gathering the remains of their power and infusing them into other Personae. In its hotel iteration, Sacrifice is performed in the Velvet Room's kitchen.

- ❖ Choose a Persona from your list, except your Starter Persona. This Persona will be permanently removed from your list;
- ❖ The player gains SP equal to half the sacrificed Persona's level to be distributed amongst the other Personae of the User in any configuration;
- ❖ If the party possesses the Confidant of the sacrificed Persona's Arcana, the character acquires a Spell Card at random from the sacrificed Persona's deck;
- ❖ Some Personae can also give special pieces of equipment or items when sacrificed, but the details of this process are left to the Narrator's discretion;

Seclusion

The final feature offered by the Velvet Room is Persona Seclusion. You may deliver a Persona, other than your Starter, into the care of the Velvet Room while specifying a Type the specified Persona is not Weak to. The Persona will be unavailable for 48 hours, or 8 Time blocks, but, after that, the Persona gains the specified Type, and Resist <Type> in case of no interactions to the Type. If there is already a resistance, they are upgraded as follows: Resist – Null – Reflect – Drain. This ritual can only be done once per Persona.

PART VI

ACTIVITIES

Time Blocks, Activities and Social Skills

A User's life cannot be dedicated exclusively to fighting Shadows and exploring the Metaverse. During their downtime, Users are free to enjoy several activities to sharpen their social skills and meet new Confidants. A normal day is divided into 4 blocks: Night, Morning, Afternoon and Evening, with each taking up roughly 6 hours, with Night starting at midnight sharp. The sub-blocks Lunchtime and After School are too short for activities, but can fulfill different purposes such as short rests or interactions with the world, taking up approximately an hour each.

The Night block is usually reserved for sleep. If a character goes 24 hours without sleep, they immediately are reduced to zero Energy, if their energy is positive, and will continue to lose 1d4 Energy per block spent without sleep. A character whose VIT is reduced to zero due to sleep deprivation falls unconscious until the end of the block, recovering enough Energy to restore their VIT to 1. Users may use either sub-blocks or an hour of a normal block to restore 1d6 Energy and VITd6 HP.

To raise a Social Skill, the character must invest all the time of any given block to the activity, which doesn't necessarily mean they'll spend the entire six hours actively participating. Every time a User dedicates a full block to an Activity, they gain 1 point in that skill. When the User has enough points to qualify for a new "Tier", they gain a new feature related to their growth. Effects that raise a character's Tier temporarily also raise their score to qualify for that Tier, but do not grant the Tier's skill, if any.

Tier	Points
0	0-4
I	5-14
II	15-29
III	30-54
IV	55-79
V	80

Tier	Knowledge	Discipline	Empathy	Charm	Expression	Courage
0	Slacker	Bumbling	Indifferent	Plain	Monotone	Timid
I	Aware	Decent	Inoffensive	Existent	Rough	Ordinary
II	Learned	Persistent	Kindly	Confident	Eloquent	Determined
III	Scholarly	Thorough	Generous	Suave	Inspiring	Staunch
IV	Encyclopedic	Masterful	Selfless	Popular	Touching	Dauntless
V	Erudite	Transcendent	Saintly	Debonair	Enthralling	Badass

Knowledge

- ❖ Studying: You can study a specific subject or general knowledge. Best done with friends or during relaxing weather. Can be done anywhere comfortable, at any time.
- ❖ Academic Project: The character can focus on a particular field of studies. Presenting and defending your project are intimidating challenges, but offer a vast reward in knowledge and self-reliance.
- ❖ Library: The character explores the mysterious Boukyaku (忘却) Library that only opens once the sun has set and closes as soon as it rises. There's no telling what you'll learn lost amidst the dusty shelves and twisting corridors.

Narrators and players are both encouraged to alter these activities and come up with new ones to better fit their stories.

Discipline

- ❖ Part-time Jobs/Overtime: Students can choose to work part-time temp jobs while adult characters can choose to stay in their offices after hours.
- ❖ Martial Arts, Paintball and Extreme Sports: Discover your inner strength at the dojo, challenge your limits in high speed or dizzying heights, or experience the excitement of the battlefield. These will leave your body exhausted, but your focus sharper than ever.

Empathy

- ❖ Community Service: Tokyo's many homeless depend on the goodwill of more fortunate strangers to survive. Working in soup kitchen and homeless lodgings is a great way to become more understanding of others' needs.
- ❖ Crossroads Bar: This mysterious bar in the seediest area of the town is the perfect spot to interact with the most peculiar members of the underworld, but you'll need to have a certain magnetism to draw out the good stories from the clientele.

Charm

- ❖ Pheromone Café: The mysterious "Queen Bee Coffee" is surrounded by all sorts of rumors. Some say that spending an evening appreciating the sophisticated architecture and the exotic flavor of the brew can make anyone more attractive, but you'd need a certain level of book smarts to get the most out of the experience.
- ❖ Debates and Cultural Events: Show off your formal knowledge and sharpen your discourse skills intellectually fencing with those who share interests with you. Learning with dissertations and exhibitions can be as valuable as being the center of attention.
- ❖ Tutoring: Put your knowledge to the test teaching schoolchildren, working with them to answer questions and develop a bond with your student.

- ❖ Acting Classes: The local college's Drama Club is always accepting new members, but be warned: You need a fair deal of dedication to grasp and execute the eccentric orders of the club's leading professor in front of strangers.
- ❖ ScreenShot Theater: Enjoy the best the seventh art has to offer, both new and old. If you can apply what you've learned, you'll realize you can learn much from the dramatic scenes in the silver screen. In some special occasions, you may even increase other Skills.

Expression ✨

- ❖ Translation: Accept small translation jobs to test your writing prowess. You need a high degree of knowledge to recognize and properly adapt the intent of each text. If your work is good enough, you may even be rewarded.
- ❖ Literature, Cinema, Theater, Music: Spend a few hours appreciating a new media experience. Reading a new book, watching a theater play or finding a new favorite band are great ways to expand your artistic reach.
- ❖ Poetry: Set aside a part of your day to express your inner truth through prose. Meet new people and learn new techniques at the weekly poetry jams.
- ❖ Theater and Karaoke: Gather your friends and sing the night away at Tokyo's best Karaoke cabinets or show off your dramatic potential in amateur theater plays.

Courage ✨

- ❖ Haunted House: “Do YOU have what it takes to survive the night at the Mansion of a Million Maladies?” Visit Tokyo’s most horrifying attraction, employing state-of-the-art technology for an unbeatable horror experience. Go through the manor without losing your cool and you might find that past challenges seemed easier in retrospect.
- ❖ Meditation: The true enemy lies within. Isolate yourself from the world, focus and meditate on the nature and intensity of your fears, learn how to defeat them and tame the inner beast.
- ❖ Beef Bowl Challenge: The family restaurant Aiya officially opened a franchise in Tokyo, and they’re ready to face off with the big restaurant chains: With the Mega Beef Bowl Challenge. Any spirit brave or foolish enough to accept the Challenge will be remembered as an icon of gluttony and, maybe, eat the most daring meal of their lives for free: The hero who can single-handedly eat this monster of a meal within 40 minutes doesn’t have to pay for it. Best of luck, you’ll need it.

Confidants

“A circle of those who, by faith or morals, lend you their strength. In other words, Confidants are your bonds with those who are also chained to their pasts.”

Unlikely friends, romantic interests, those cursed by misfortune and many truly peculiar figures are drawn to the Potential and can carry the power of several Arcana, even if they have no knowledge or ability pertaining to the Metaverse and its secrets. Developing legitimate, long-lasting bonds with these allies and other Users can grant unique abilities, valuable contacts and more power to be used against the encroaching Shadows. Knowing how to efficiently manage your time between exploring Palaces, spending time with Confidants and sharpening your skills is an essential part of the Users' lives.

Mechanically, Confidants (also known as SL, or Social Links) are a way to mechanically represent the relationships formed between characters formed by players. This relationship can be between a player character and an NPC or between two player characters. Starting, maintaining and improving the bonds with your Confidants is useful as it grants several bonuses for the player and the party as a whole. The progress on a player-NPC Confidant and its bonuses are shared amongst the party.

A player progresses through a Social Link gaining Ranks, earned spending time with the character that represents a certain Arcana. Ranks start at 1 and go up to 100. There are several ways to increase your Confidant Rank and each Confidant has preferences for gifts, activities, etc.

With NPCs

Each NPC you can form a Confidant bond with represents one of the Arcana the party does not possess. The Narrator can opt not to reveal the Arcana before the bond is formed. NPCs have preferences, personalities and unique styles that will affect how each Social Link is to be treated and nurtured. Most Confidant NPCs have a short personal backstory that will be resolved and expanded upon as the party spends time with them. The particular mechanics on progressing with Confidants, and a helpful mini-sheet for Confidant features, can be found in Part X - Becoming the Narrator. The most common way to develop a Confidant bond is spending a full Time block interacting with the Confidant during an Activity.

Reaching Rank 50 with a Confidant unlocks the ability to activate their Arcana Spread. The User who reaches Rank 100 with a Confidant gains an Aspect, Feat or unique ability that represents the time they spent with the Confidant. On top of that, the party gains an object of significance to the Confidant that allows them to fuse or fight the extremely powerful Ultimate Persona of that Arcana.

With Players

Bonds between party members are a bit more complicated than those with NPCs. Social Links among players are asynchronous, with each Arcana developing individually. A Confidant progression still goes up to 100, but the reward for reaching Rank 50 is altered: Reaching this Rank allows each user to generate a Spell Card from one of their skills and trade it with the other User at no cost. At Rank 75, one User can intercept an attack that would put the other in Death's Door, as an Interrupt action, once per day. At Rank 100, the party gains the ability to face or fuse the Ultimate Persona and the character who reached the Rank gains an Aspect that's similar or related to the Confidant's Aspects.

Gaining points for a player's Confidant can be done in several ways:

- ❖ Combat Support: Casting a spell from the Buff or Defense Categories targeting an ally who's not already under that effect grants +2 Ranks to both caster and target.
- ❖ Activities: Two or more players can perform the same activity in the same block, gaining a chance to sharpen their Social Skills and earning +3 Ranks for each players' progression.
- ❖ Vital Support: Healing a negative Status off another User or using a Revive effect grants +4 Ranks to the Confidant of the target player.
- ❖ Defeating a Tyrant: Triumph against the odds and solving a Palace that once seemed insurmountable steals the bonds of trust amongst the party members, increasing the Ranks of all participants in +10.
- ❖ Gifts: Carefully picked presents concede Ranks equivalent to its value in RP. The receiver can choose to gain less or more Ranks if the present is to their liking or not, depending on the Narrator's approval.

Ultimate Personae

Users who reach Rank 100 with a Confidant receive an object of personal significance representing the bond between those involved. This object can be taken to the Velvet Room as the catalyst to a special ritual: Igor will use it to create a special arena where the party must defeat the Ultimate Persona of that Arcana, Shadows whose power rivals even the strongest Tyrants. If the Users can defeat this Shadow, it becomes a Persona that can be acquired by any one User, even those without the power of the Wildcard. Additionally, all Wildcard Users in the party unlock the permanent ability to create the Ultimate Persona through fusion. This ritual can only be performed once per Arcana.

PART VII

COMBAT

Combat

Combat is performed on a map divided in square segments: each User, Persona, object, and most Shadows occupy one square each. Some Shadows and objects can occupy more spaces, and each square segment is approximately 1m², or 1x1 yards.

Start of Combat

To determine the acting order of the characters engaged in combat, each participant rolls 1d12+AGI, plus any values granted by other means to obtain their Initiative. The order of actions is determined by the highest to lowest Initiative rolls. Draws are solved by whoever has the highest AGI. If all tied AGI scores are equal, each participant rolls 1d6 and the highest value wins (repeat as needed until the draw is resolved).

Turn Actions

Your turn is composed of four actions: Movement, Free, Quick, and Default, in any order.

- ❖ Movement: The character may move a number of spaces equal to AGI + 3, plus any relevant bonusus. Diagonal movement is considered as various linear movements: Moving diagonally forward and left, for example, is considered as moving left, then up.
- ❖ Quick: A small action, if any are available. Spells with the Quick Category also fall under this definition. You can only perform one Quick action per turn.
 - ❖ Free: Any number of small actions or reactions described as Free actions.
 - ❖ Default: A normal action, if available, like attacking or casting a spell.

Finally, there is one type of action that may be used out of your turn.

- ❖ Interrupt Actions: Some spells and special abilities can be activated at any time, including out of your own turn. If you use an Interrupt action, you cannot use another until the end of your next turn. Interrupt actions take place during another unit's turn. If an Interrupt action moves you outside of an attack's range, you automatically dodge that attack.

If an event is triggered by a turn's passage, like damage dealt by Poison or resisting a Status effect, it's resolved after all actions on the turn, in any order.

You can freely speak with your allies for no action cost, but your Narrator may limit the duration of interactions to keep combat flowing and tense.

Movement and Targeting

A character may move a number of spaces equal to their AGI+3, also referred to as Movement Allowance. Spaces with allies can be passed through freely, but you cannot finish your movement in a space that's occupied. Spaces with enemies cannot be traversed unless a spell or ability allows you to.

Each attack has a number of targets it can hit and a maximum distance that these targets can be from the caster. Abilities that hit more than one target still require only one hit roll, applied to all targets. The targeting types are as follows:

- ❖ A target within x meters: An ally or enemy within x meters of the caster.

- ❖ One target and all adjacent targets: All targets within the adjacent spaces of the target also receive the skill's effects.
- ❖ Up to x targets: Any number of targets between 1 and x, chosen by the player, within the spell's range.
- ❖ Any number of targets: Any number of eligible units within range, once each.
- ❖ An x-meter long line: Trace a straight line across the battle map, x meters long, and roll for hitting each target within this line once.
- ❖ Up to x random targets: Determine how many targets this spell will hit and roll to decide which targets it'll hit.
- ❖ Caster: The effect is applied only to whoever casts the spell.
- ❖ All combatants within X meters from the target: The spell hits the original target and all valid targets within X meters from it, including allies.
- ❖ All combatants: All characters who have rolled for Initiative in this combat, even those outside the main combat zone.

Actions

These are the Default actions you can perform during your turn:

- ❖ A short- or long-range attack with your weapon: If the target is within the reach specified by your weapon, you can attack with it, which is known as a basic attack. Before rolling for damage, the target must roll for dodging your attack. If you hit, roll for the specified damage and any additional effects.
- ❖ Use a spell or skill: Follow the activation rules of the skill or spell, allowing each target to roll for dodging, if possible.
- ❖ Changing Personae: Select another Persona you control and apply its bonuses to your character, if any. You can perform this action as a Quick action once per combat, more if you have the One in Spirit Feat.
- ❖ Item/Equipment: You can use a consumable item, in accordance to its rules. Alternatively, you can switch any number of equipment pieces by another piece that's not being used by other Users.
- ❖ Negotiate: You can strike up conversation with most Shadows. To do this, declare a negotiation attempt, choose one of your Social Skills and risk a dice of your preference. You can only negotiate with Shadows whose HP are under 10% of their maximum value, suffering a Status effect or whose weaknesses have been hit in this combat. The Loquacity spell ignores these limitations, as do Natural Skills related to negotiation. Rewards gained from a successful negotiation include money, items and Spell Cards. Any Class can negotiate with Shadows, but only

Wildcards can acquire new Personae through negotiation.

Negotiation rewards are described in more detail in Part XI.

- Upon acquiring a new Persona, copy its name, level, Types, bonuses and Natural Skill into a new Persona sheet and pick spells considering its SP as its Level + 1.

Attacking and Dodging

All basic attacks and most spells allow for a dodge attempt through the following rolls:

Hit: TECd6 (roll one six-sided die for each TEC point)

Dodge: AGId6 (roll one six-sided die for each AGI point)

If the defender's result is greater than or equal to the attacker's, the attack misses or is blocked, and nothing happens. If the attack hits, roll for the indicated damage and apply the necessary damage reductions. Light and Dark Type spells do not roll for Hit or Dodge. The attacker may choose to spend 1 Luck Charge (Page 44) per attack to add +1d6 to the attack roll, and the target may choose to spend 1 Luck Charge to add +1d6 to the dodge roll, neither incurring action costs.

Example: Carol chooses to cast Agi against a Jotun. Carol has 4 TEC and Jotun has 2 AGI. Carol rolls 4d6 and gets a 9. Jotun rolls 2d6 and gets a 5. The attack is a success, Carol calculates damage and combat continues.

Non-Lethal Attacks

You can declare a normal basic attack that is guaranteed to leave the target with 1 HP if it were to kill the target otherwise. To do so, declare your intention before rolling for hit and roll with a -1 TEC penalty.

Critical Hits

When you hit a basic attack or a Physical, Fire, Ice, Wind, or Thunder spell, you can opt to spend a Luck Charge and roll 1d10. If your result is 1 or 2, your attack is considered a Critical hit. Critical Hits deal double the original damage and some spells and some spells and weapons have effects that deal secondary effects to targets upon a Critical hit.

Spell Deck

Each player has a Spell Deck. This Deck contains the skills known by the Active Persona; plus, any other valid skills the User may use (such as skills earned by Confidant bonuses or Shadow Class spells). Each copy of a spell allows it to be cast once for no cost each day. When you switch to a different Persona, your Spell Deck changes accordingly. Your spell uses are recharged at the end of the Night block, at 6am.

The order in which to calculate damage is as follows:

1. Rolled damage;
2. Damage-boosting effects, such as Fire Amp, Geas, Inferno Bracelet, etc.;
3. Charge Category effects;
4. Critical Hit multiplier;
5. Critical Category effects;
6. Type-related damage reduction (Resistance, Weakness, etc.);
7. Specific reduction effects, such as Hariti's Ogre Bones and Users' gear.

Energy

Fatigue is the enemy of all Persona Users: Battle after battle in the Metaverse simply burns through your resistances and puts you at a massive disadvantage. You can use Energy to prepare spells that no longer have free uses, but this will eventually exhaust your body. Your maximum Energy is determined by VIT plus half your level, and any bonuses granted through Feats, equipment or special abilities. Spending Energy equal to the Tier of a given spell allows you to cast it normally.

For each two Energy points below zero, you receive a -1 VIT, -1 AGI penalty. You can spend Energy that would reduce your VIT to zero or below. If this happens, you pass out until the end of combat. When combat ends, recover Energy to the minimum required amount to leave you with 1 VIT. Note that increasing your maximum Energy during combat does not increase your current Energy.

Example: Dan is a physically-focused fighter. His VIT is 5 at level 8, so his maximum Energy is 9. He cast Fatal End (Tier II) during the previous round and wants to do so again. He spends two Energy points to reutilize Fatal End, dropping his energy to 7, incurring no penalties.

Example: Alice is an Ice-based fighter. Her VIT is 2, as is her Level, so her maximum Energy is 3. She had to reuse a few spells today so her current Energy is -2, which by itself causes her VIT and AGI to be decreased by 1 each. She recycles Bufula (Tier II) and casts it. After casting, she writes down her new penalty, reducing her VIT to zero. Alice is incapacitated until the end of combat.

Energy can be restored through rest. One block of time spent sleeping is enough to restore Energy equal to your maximum Energy. If your Energy is in the negatives, more rest will be required.

Example: Dan had a long weekend fighting a powerful Tyrant and had to reuse the same spells several times, bringing his Energy to -8. Once he returns from the Metaverse, he goes right to bed and passes out for six hours, bringing his Energy up to 1. The following morning, he still feels a bit crummy but can still fight normally. An extended nap or spending the day in rest can help restore this value further.

Hit and Dodge Categories

Some skills may increase the number of faces in your Dodge or Hit die. Certain spells denote an increase in your HDC (Hit Dice Category) while some passive effects may increase or decrease your DDC (Dodge Dice Category). If more than one effect affects your Dice Categories at once, effects are considered stacked and applied simultaneously. For example, if you're suffering a -1 HDC penalty and cast a spell with +2 HDC, consider your HDC as +1.

Dice Categories scale as follows: d1 – d2 – d4 – d6 – d8 – d10 – d12

For d1, use the base value of the skill.

For d2, use a coin.

Damage Reduction (DR)

Armor, elemental interactions, Feats and other effects may reduce the damage dealt by attacks. Armors, in general, decrease damage from all regular damage types: Physical, Gun, Fire, Ice, Wind and Thunder, by a fixed value, while having a resistance to a particular Type reduces the damage dealt by half. If a damage reduction effect does not specify a Type, consider its reduction to all Types listed above. If an attack hits, it deals at least 1 point of damage, even if damage reduction effects are higher than the dealt damage, as long as the target does not Null, Reflect or Drain the specified Type. Almighty Type spells ignore all damage reductions and resistances, always dealing the rolled damage if they hit.

Perception and Intel

Gathering info on your enemies, allies and the arena around you is a critical piece of Persona combat. A Persona with the Intel Type and a Perception category spell adds a number of Cognitive Counters to the party's counter pool at the start of each of their turns. These counters can be used by most Intel Type spells to acquire data to the caster or change the state of combat. A User can only have one Perception Category spell at a time.

The most common use of your counters is for acquiring critical info about your enemies, such as HP, elemental interactions and other data that can be discovered with a relatively low number of counters and for no cost of actions. More dedicated Users can alter the perception of all combatants, altering combat capabilities, building cognitive objects to assist or hinder targets, and even change the action order of the round. Analysis spells do not cost any actions, meaning a User can spend several counters to acquire large amounts of data before deciding on an action in a single turn.

Using an Analysis category spell grants the Analyzed condition to the target(s). Some spells can only target Analyzed targets.

Status Effects

Every time a spell or attack can deal a harmful Status, roll LCKd12. This test replaces a traditional dodge roll for Status Type spells, but doesn't replace the dodge roll for Status Category abilities. If you rolled at least one 12, you automatically avoid the Status. If you don't, roll 1d100: Roll two d10, choosing which will be your decimal house die and which will be your unit die before rolling. If both die show 0, consider the result 100. Compare this value to the activation chance for the spell. If your roll is greater than the trigger chance, you avoid suffering the Status effect, but still take damage and other effects from the attack. A character can suffer more than one Status effect at once, and must roll individually to recover from each one.

Example: A Succubus casts Marin Karin against Alice. Alice has 3 LCK, rolling 3d12: 9, 4 and 3. As none of these values were 12, the Narrator warns Alice that Marin Karin's Charmed chance is 35+5TEC% which, considering Succubus's TEC score of 4, means the activation chance is 55%. Alice rolls a d10 twice, getting a 3 and a 7 in that order, rolling a 37. Since her roll is below 55, Alice falls under the effects of Charmed.

Status effects can be grouped into three categories based on the nature of the affliction it causes: Mind, affecting the psyche; Nervous, afflicting the body; and Mixed. Null Mind and Null Nervous make a creature immune to the particular category, while Null Status makes the user immune to all Status listed above and other Shadow-specific Status effects.

Mind Effects

The chance to recover from all Mind Effects is 33%, rolled at the end of each of the afflicted unit's turns. For brevity, you may choose to roll 1d6, succeeding the check if a 1 or a 2 is rolled.

- ❖ Charmed puts the character under the Narrator's control or makes an enemy attack other enemies or cast supporting spells targetting the party.
- ❖ Panicked prevents Persona usage on Users and prevents spell use on Shadows.
- ❖ Fearful inflicts a -1 DDC penalty while active. If a User does not recover at the end of their turn, they lose one use of a random spell or an Energy point (their choice).
- ❖ Enraged increases Physical and Gun Type damage taken and dealt by 50% and lowers your HDC by 1. Enraged targets can choose to automatically fail the recovery roll.

Nervous Effects

- ❖ Stunned reduces the target's DDC by 1 and blocks the target from using Quick, Free and Interrupt actions. Recovery chance is 33%.
- ❖ Shocked targets cannot roll for dodging. Additionally, all attacks declared against Shocked targets gain +1 Critical Margin. Targets recovers from Shocked automatically at the end of their turn.
- ❖ Slowed reduces your Movement Allowance to half its normal value and inflicts -1 HDC. At the end of each turn, recovery chance is 33%.

Miscellaneous Effects

- ❖ Poisoned deals 20% of target's maximum HP as damage that ignores all resistances. At the end of each turn, recovery chance is 33%.
- ❖ Knocked Down is dealt by Knockdown Category skills and inflicts -3 DDC, knocking the target prone and stopping them from performing any actions. Target recovers automatically at the end of their turn. An adjacent ally can use their movement action to recover a Knocked Down character instantly.

Death

A User with exactly zero HP isn't considered dead, but can only declare Quick actions in their turn and can be revived with both Heal and Revive effects.

A User whose HP drops below zero is considered unconscious, losing up to 5 Energy if possible, and entering a state called Death's Door. In this state, the character is incapable of performing any actions, but isn't removed from the initiative queue. Effects that “instantly kill” targets put Users to Death’s Door automatically, at -1 HP.

A character who enters Death's Door immediately receives 3 unique counters. During their turn, the player must roll 1d12: If the result is higher than their VIT score, the User loses a counter. If any attack is declared that includes a User in Death's Door as a target, that target cannot roll for dodging and immediately loses a counter.

If combat comes to an end with at least one User in Death's Door, the initiative queue can continue as the other characters attempt to assist their fallen comrade. Users with an Aspect related to medicine can spend 2 Aspect Points and perform a Knowledge check (with a difficulty to be decided by the Narrator) to give the fallen User another counter. This action is considered an Aspect invocation and is subject to being denied or countered by the Narrator. A User can only gain one extra counter per session.

A character who loses all their counters is considered immediately and irrevocably dead.
No effects can restore their life.

Escape

Conflicts seldom must continue until one side is completely slain. Each character can use their full turn to escape combat. The escaping player must roll AGId6, which is considered a movement action. The enemy combatant with the highest TEC that is not under a Status effect, rolls TECd6. If the Agility test is higher than the opposed TEC check, the character escapes from combat. Each character who's already escaped can assist other's attempts by drawing the attention of one Shadow in combat: that Shadow is not able to roll against the escape attempt as long as its attention is split.

End of Combat

Experience Points (Exp.) are distributed to all characters equally, according to the levels of the enemies. Characters who finished the combat with exactly zero HP pass out and stay that way until their HP are restored to at least 1, but are not under immediate risk of death as long as they're not wounded further. Extra Experience Points may be distributed by the Narrator according to each character's achievements.

PART VIII

EQUIPMENT

Money

At the start of each week, usually at the start of the Morning block of each Sunday, each character receives an amount of Resource Points (RP) calculated from how many time blocks were dedicated to work and their associated Social Skill, with values based on the table below. Part-time Work assumes the character dedicated one block to work per day, while Fulltime assumes the use of two blocks per day, Monday-to-Friday.

Social Skill	Pay	Part-Time	Fulltime	Description
Tier 0 and I	0.5 RP per block	2.5 RP/week	5.0 RP/week	Newbie, Trainee
Tier II	1 RP per block	5 RP/week	10 RP/week	Veteran
Tier III	2 RP per block	10 RP/week	20 RP/week	Manager
Tier IV	3 RP per block	15 RP/week	30 RP/week	Owner, Visionary
Tier V	5 RP per block	25 RP/week	50 RP/week	Legendary

If the character studies, but does not work, their income depends on school performance. At the start of each week, the student earns RP in the form of student welfare, as long as he was present to at least three full days of school for the previous week.

A character's academic Yield is measured adding Discipline and Knowledge Tiers, and Yield rewards are described on the attached table. Users may not Risk to supplement their Yield nor add Luck Charges to the check. If the character is enrolled in school and currently holds a job, student welfare is ignored and the character earns only their work's pay.

Your weekly RP earnings don't represent, however, your accumulated wealth. In some situations, you may bargain with your Narrator to fall back on a few extra Resource Points through your Aspects. Similarly, it's understood Users might have everyday expenses, but these do not affect their RP reserves. The list below only shows a rough estimate and examples of living with the specified amounts after basic expenses.

Yield	Reward
0-1	1.25 RP/week
2-3	2.5 RP/week
4-5	5.0 RP/week
6-7	7.5 RP/week
8 and higher	12.5 RP/week

- ❖ Earning up to 2.5 RP per week, you probably live with your parents and have a modest amount of cash to spend with the occasional outing or leisure activity. Living by yourself with this amount is barely possible, as you'll require the help of friends or welfare to live.
- ❖ With up to 5 weekly RP, you can live by yourself in a small apartment at a low-income district, modestly. The standard of living for the average Japanese worker.
- ❖ With up to 10 weekly RP, you can live comfortably in a modern apartment with enough money to finance activities and hobbies or provide living conditions to a small family.
- ❖ With up to 20 RP per week, you probably own a large house in a privileged zone, more than one personal vehicle, private staff, and money is rarely, if ever, a concern. Starting from this point, your earnings make you stand out in your field of employment.

- ❖ With 25 weekly RP you can lead an extravagant lifestyle without looking at its price tag. People who know your work respect and admire you and it's likely you've been on TV at least once due to your feats.
- ❖ At 30 RP or above, you can live without ever looking at your bank account balance and you've successfully dug yourself a spot in the bourgeoisie elite of Tokyo, earning several exclusive benefits at the highest-class businesses around the world. You're likely very well known, even outside your sphere of influence.

Each item has a particular RP cost, generally non-negotiable. All purchases are to be paid in full upon purchase and players can freely swap RP between themselves. RP can be divided in two and four parts (.50 and .25 RP). Resource Points that are not used up until the end of the week are considered used up with bills, leisure, set aside or generally made unavailable, and do not carry over to the next week. RP is not a measure of accumulated wealth and extra RP can be negotiated with the Narrator for emergencies. Items with the “Special” price cannot be found in stores, existing generally in dangerous places in the Metaverse or in mysterious stores fetching exorbitant prices.

The party's consumable and equipment reserves are public: any User can use any other User's items, unless the item's owner specifies otherwise.

Not all items are available at all times: the first time in the week when certain items are requested by the players, the Narrator must make a Rarity roll for each item to discover how many copies of each item, if any, will be made available for the week. This roll cannot be affected by Luck Charges and items unavailable in stores may still be made available through other means.

Equipment

Pieces of equipment can have a series of complimentary effects, or Properties. Each User can only equip one weapon, armor and accessory at a time. Changing out of and into equipment is considered a default action.

Understanding Weapons and Armor

- ❖ A weapon's reach has no implicit information. If a weapon has a Reach of 5, it can only target enemies exactly 5 meters away. A 1-5 Reach weapon can hit a space within that range.
- ❖ A weapon's damage is usually calculated through STR, MAG or either, denoted by SKL. Damage dealt is Physical unless specified otherwise. For example, a weapon that deals 2d6+2STR damage equipped by a character with 3 STR deals 2d6+6 damage.
- ❖ Damage reduction on armor can scale off your VIT score. This reduction is applied to Physical, Gun, Fire, Ice, Wind, Thunder, Nuke, PSY, Light, Dark and Intel damage unless specified otherwise. For example, an armor that gives 5+VIT damage reduction equipped by a character with 3 VIT would reduce incoming damage from those Types by 8.

Weapon Properties

- ❖ Critical X: A weapon with this property deals X extra damage in case of a critical hit, on top of the multiplied damage of the attack. This extra damage is of the same Type as the weapon's main damage Type and is added immediately after the critical multiplier.
- ❖ Snipe X: A weapon with this property can be used out of its normal range with the added cost of -1 TEC on the hit roll for each two spaces used beyond its range, up to X.
- ❖ <Type> Boost: Grants the benefits of the equivalent Passive spell, increasing the damage dealt by attacks of this Type declared by the user by 25%.
- ❖ Piercing X: A weapon with this property deals extra damage against targets that resist the attack's Type. Piercing 1 deals 10% extra damage against targets that Resist the attack's Type. Piercing 2 deals 25% more damage, and Piercing 3 ignores Resist effects and treats Null as Resist.
- ❖ Transfer (Property): A weapon with the Transfer keyword passes the benefits of the specified property to Physical Type spells cast while you have this piece of equipment equipped. For example, a weapon with Transfer (Critical) and Critical 1d6 deals bonus damage on a critical hit, passing this benefit along to all Physical Type spells cast by the wielder. If no properties are specified, all valid keywords are transferred.
- ❖ Magic Transfer (Property): A spell with the incredible keyword Magic Transfer gives the benefits of the specified property to all spells cast by the wielder. For example, a weapon with Magic Transfer (Snipe) and Snipe 2 allows the user to cast Agi, and any other spells, at a greater range, incurring a TEC penalty. These properties are not applied when it would make no sense to do so: Rakunda cannot score a Critical and Evil Smile cannot Pierce. If no properties are specified, all properties are transferred.

- ❖ Cast X: A weapon with this property activates the specified spell when the attack connects. This spell does not have to be in your deck, but costs Energy equal to the spell's Tier to be activated. The wielder can choose whether or not to activate after damage calculation.

Armor Properties

- ❖ Evade <Type> X: Augments your ability to avoid attacks of the specified Type by increasing your DDC against the particular Type. For example, Evade Fire 1 increases your dodge roll to spells like Agi to AGId8 instead of AGId6.
- ❖ Fortify <Type> X: Grants X damage reduction against the specified Type, added after normal damage reduction. If no Types are specified, grants the effect to all damage types except Light, Dark, Intel and Almighty.
- ❖ <Type> Boost: Similar to the equivalent passive spell and weapon category, boosts damage done by the wielder by 25% while casting spells and declaring attacks of that Type.
- ❖ Move X: Increases your movement allowance by X
- ❖ Transfer: Armor with this property grant its other categories to Defense Type spells cast by the wearer for the same duration of the cast effect.
- ❖ Magic Transfer: In addition to the Transfer property effect, also gives the affected targets the armor's Damage Reduction for the duration of the spell. This value is added to the targets' normal Damage Reduction.

Vajra	STRd12 + 8	1-6	+1 Death's Door Counter	A holy ceremonial blade made from the bones of gods.	Special

Armor

The damage reduction listed below applies to the Physical, Fire, Ice, Wind, Thunder, Nuke, PSY, Light, Dark and Intel Types (note that this does not include Almighty Type attacks), unless specified. Each character can only wear one piece of armor at a time.

Armors that require X STR to be worn require the user to maintain the specified value as long as he has the armor on himself. If the user's STR score is ever below the required value, its damage reduction is ignored and the user's movement allowance is limited to 1 space per turn until the requirements are met again. Equipping, removing or switching armor is considered a default action, replacing your attack.

PART VIII

SPELLS

Categories

- ❖ (A) – Active Ability. Must be declared and is spent immediately after use.
- ❖ (P) – Passive Ability. Is always active as long as it's on your spell deck.
- ❖ (H) – Held Ability. Must be activated but can stay active for several turns, usually for a cost.
- ❖ (B) – Burst Ability. Spells that are fully cast in two consecutive turns: The Cast effect happens immediately, and the Burst effect happens during the caster's next turn, both as standard actions. This is considered a singular cast for the effects of Energy and usage expenditure, as well as other effects activated while casting. If a User casts a Burst Category spell, they must spend their next turn's standard action triggering the Burst action, unless an effect prevents them from doing so. If a User is prevented from triggering a Burst effect, the spell dissipates.
 - If a spell has Hit clauses for both Cast and Burst effects, you may choose to roll to hit during Cast then, during Burst, hit all targets that failed to dodge the Cast's roll. Alternatively, you may choose to roll both times. If units hit by the Cast action are defeated by the time you trigger Burst, you may choose new targets up to the spell's stated target allowance, rolling to hit the new targets.
- ❖ Combo – Can hit more targets than originally stated under certain circumstances.
- ❖ Multi – Hits a specific number of targets chosen by the caster.
- ❖ Line – Hits all possible targets between two points.
- ❖ Total – Can hit all targets within a certain area. The caster may choose to not hit some targets.
- ❖ Dance – All chosen targets must be hit once each before any target can be hit more than once. Ignores Weakness on subsequent hits to the same target.
- ❖ Critical – Describes an extra effect that happens when the spell scores a Critical hit.
- ❖ Quick – Can be cast as a Quick action.
- ❖ Interrupt – An Interrupt spell can be cast outside the caster's turn. On your own turn, an Interrupt skill is considered a free action.
- ❖ Knockdown – A Knockdown spell throws the target(s) to the floor if the spell successfully deals damage. A separate condition can be provided to activate or avoid the Knockdown effect. A particular subtype is Knockdown Weakness, activated only if the target is weak to the damage Type of the spell or Weak against Status in general.
- ❖ Realized – A Realized spell can deal damage to more than creatures with minds. While most spells deal damage only to targets who are able to comprehend the nature of the spell, a Realized Fire spell, for example, can easily set fire to an entire room.
- ❖ Repress – A Repressed spell's use is removed from your deck after use. No effect can recover it unless it specifically denotes so. Repressed spells are restored normally during the daily spell reset. You can note Repressed spell uses using the “Repr” field on your Character Sheet.
- ❖ Death – Spells with this Category effectively reduce the target's HP to -1, putting Users in Death's Door and killing Shadows immediately.
- ❖ HDC – Hit Dice Category. Alter the size of your Hit dice by the specified number of categories.
- ❖ DDC – Dodge Dice Category. Alter the size of your Dodge dice by the specified number of categories.
- ❖ Critical Margin – Improves or worsens your chance to score a Critical hit. Critical Margin +1, for example, makes it so you can score a Critical while rolling a 3, on top of 2 and 1.
- ❖ Unique – A Unique spell can only be acquired once per Persona. Other uses of this spell cannot be acquired through any means.

	Time: Default	Duration: Instant
Mabufudyne	Total, Ice (A)	Any number of targets the caster can see	Hit: MAGd4+6 Ice damage	All enemies are struck by massive ice blocks falling from the sky.
	Time: Default	Duration: Instant
Absolute Zero	Multi, Move, Ice (A)	Up to 4 targets within 7 meters	Hit: MAGd6 Ice damage. Extra: You can decrease the number of targets to deal MAG extra Ice damage to each enemy. If you choose to hit 1 enemy, its movement allowance is decreased to half for three turns.	The temperature around the caster drops drastically, creating a layer of frost around them and the struck targets.
	Time: Default	Duration: Instant
Diamond Dust	Realized, Unique, Ice (A)	1 target you can see	Hit: MAGd12+1 Ice damage Realized: The space occupied by the enemy slowly freezes. If the enemy does not leave that space until the end of its next turn, it'll be immobilized in a pillar of ice that restricts movement and reduces all damage reduction by half.	The target's is partially engulfed by a pillar of ice that rises from the ground. If the enemy does not leave the space, the pillar surrounds it almost entirely.
	Time: Default	Duration: Instant
Ice Amp	Unique, Boost, Ice (P)	Caster	Ice spells you cast deal 50% more damage. This does not stack with other Boost Category spells.	Ice created by your spells is bigger and colder. Faces and other features are carved into the icy surface of your spells.
	Time: Automatic	Duration: Passive

Nuclear

Most Nuclear spells interact with the caster's Nuclear Buildup count. Each unit starts combat with zero Buildup counters, and all Buildup counters disappear once combat ends. Each spell only adds their stated number of counters, even if they hit more than one target.

Each User can hold a number of Buildup counters equal to $(\text{MAG} + \text{VIT})/2$, rounded down. If a User would receive a counter that puts them over this limit, they take Almighty damage equal to half their maximum HP, no check, and their Buildup counters are reset to zero. Additionally, all adjacent units to the User must roll dodge against the User's TECd6. On failing, they take Nuclear damage equal to the damage dealt to the User by this effect.

Psychokinesis (PSY)

The Ingrain keyword denotes the ability of most PSY spells to apply a unique Status effect on targets already suffering from specific Status effects. When you hit a target who is suffering from a Status effect with an Ingrain spell: Choose one appropriate Ingrained Status listed below, apply it, and remove the original Status. This Ingrained Status is considered the same effect as its original Status unless stated otherwise. Effects that remove the “base” Status also remove the Ingrained effect. Each Unit can only be afflicted by 1 Ingrained Status at a time. If a unit is suffering from an Ingrained Status, ignore “Ingrain” effects from spells for that target.

Status	Ingrained	Effect
Charmed	Smitten	Smitten puts the character under the Narrator’s control or makes an enemy attack other enemies or cast supporting spells to the party. Smitten units may use their Interrupt actions to intercept an attack against the unit that applied this Status, taking half the rolled damage on hit. At the end of each turn, recovery chance is 33%.
Panicked	Desperate	Desperate prevents Persona usage on Users and prevents spell use on Shadows. At the end of each turn, recovery chance is 33%. If the unit fails its recovery check, it suffers a -1 TEC, -1 AGI penalty as long as Desperate remains active. This stacks with other activations of itself and Debuff actions.
Fearful	Hopeless	Hopeless decreases the target’s DDC by 2. At the end of each turn, recovery chance is 33%. If the target does not recover, Repress 1 use of one random spell. Shadows who suffer this effect lose access to that spell until Hopeless is healed.
Enraged	Boiling	Boiling increases Physical damage taken and dealt by 50% and decreases your HDC by 1. At the end of each turn, recovery chance is 33%. Target can choose to automatically fail the recovery roll. If a Boiling target takes damage it’s Weak to, multiply that damage by 3x instead of 2x.
Stunned	Comatose	Comatose reduces the target’s DDC by 1 and blocks the target from using standard and movement actions. Comatose targets recover upon taking damage from any source.
Shocked	Ionic	Ionic makes all attacks against the target automatically succeed and increases the Critical Margin of all attacks declared the target by 1. Each time an Ionic target takes damage, it deals (target’s) SKL + PLv. Almighty damage to all adjacent targets. Target recovers automatically at the end of their turn.
Slowed	Hobbled	Hobbled reduces your Movement Allowance to 1 and grants -2 HDC. At the end of each turn, recovery chance is 75%.
Poisoned	Blighted	Blighted deals 25% of target’s maximum HP as damage that ignores all resistances. At the end of each turn, recovery chance is 33%. If the unit fails its recovery check, each adjacent target has a 30% chance to suffer Poisoned.
Knocked Down	Earthbound	Earthbound targets cannot dodge attacks. The next attack declared against an Earthbound target deals double damage (this is applied last in damage calculation and stacks with Weakness) and removes Earthbound.

	Time: Quick	Duration: Until the end of your next turn

Light

Light spells that deal damage based on the target's current HP don't check for Dodge and cannot deal Critical hits. In this instance, Reflect Light deals damage based on the caster's HP, not the original target's. If you're hit by several Light effects at once due to reflection or Combo effects, add all percentages, ignoring the upper limit.

Unlike percent-based Light spells, Bless Category spells interact with Reflect Light and Drain Light using the default elemental interaction rules and check for dodge.

Spells with the Bless category trigger the specified effect around your Zenith of Radiance, an object that occupies one space, but does not take damage and cannot be targeted for attacks. Units can pass through the space occupied by a Zenith freely, but cannot end their turns in the same space as a Zenith. Each User can only have one Zenith present in combat at a time. If a User creates a new Zenith, all other Zeniths created by that User are dismissed.

When combat ends, all Zeniths are dismissed. A Zenith's range is always its caster's TEC/2 (Minimum 1). Bless effects that specify a Combat Skill always use the caster's Skill at the time of activation. All Bless effects last until the start of your next turn unless stated otherwise, and effects are only active as long as the targets remain within the Zenith's range.

Dark

Death Category spells do not check for Dodge and cannot deal Critical hits. For these spells, Weakness to Dark doubles the percentage, while Resistance reduces it in half. Drain Dark doubles your current HP, up to your maximum HP. Reflect Dark tests against the caster's current HP.

Unlike Death Category Dark spells, Curse Category spells interact with Reflect Dark and Drain Dark using the default elemental interaction rules and check for dodge.

Curse: A condition applied to units who were damaged by Curse category spells. At the start of that unit's turn, the effect stated on the original spell's Curse is triggered, after which the Curse effect disappears. The target cannot dodge this activation.

Curse damage is always Dark Type and is calculated by the user's MAG at the start of the target's turn. Curse applications stack: If a unit is targeted by more than one Curse spell in that round, it takes damage from all Curse instances in any order. Multi and Total Category Curse Spells apply Curse to all targets hit by the original spell.

Curse is considered a Condition (similar to Analyzed), and cannot be removed by any effects that don't specifically remove Curse or Conditions in general.

Almighty

Almighty Spells can be learned by any Personae, but Personae with the Almighty Type gain a 1 SP (Minimum 0.5) discount on buying Almighty spells. However, forgetting these spells refunds half of the spent SP (Minimum 0.25). Almighty damage ignores damage reduction and bypasses Makarakarn. The Energy cost on the Effect box is added to the normal cost of casting.

Debuff

Only the highest Debuff effect to any given Skill can be active at a time, unless the effect specifies otherwise. Casting the same effect resets its duration to the new spell's duration. Casting a Debuff spell that affects the same Skills as an active Buff effect removes the specific Buff effects. Elements is a shorthand for the following Types: Fire, Ice, Wind, Thunder, Nuclear, PSY.

Murderous Phobia	Fear, Intel (A)	1 target within 6 meters	Target rolls an attack that deals STRd6 or MAGd6 Intel damage, whichever is higher, against itself.	A malignant specter hovers above the target, attacking with an ethereal scythe.
	Time: Standard	Duration: Immediate

Limit Breaker+	Charge, Buff, Intel (A)	All allies	Spend 4 counters. When caster or an ally declares an attack against an Analyzed target, caster or attacking character can spend 2 Energy to gain the effects of Mind Charge or Power Charge as a free action for their next attack: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ❖ Mind Charge: Your next Fire, Ice, Wind or Thunder attack that deals damage has its damage multiplied by 2.5 ❖ Power Charge: Your next basic attack or Physical spell that deals damage has its damage multiplied by 2.5. 	The affected target feels a surge of energy when attacking, delivering more accurate and deadlier attacks.
	Time: Quick	Duration: Permanent
Mind Shackle	Vision, Intel (A)	1 target within 6 meters	Surrounds target by an illusion representing something target fears or cannot move past. Target takes MAGd6 or STRd6 Intel damage, whichever is higher, if target moves from its original position naturally. At the end of each of caster's turns, target has 33% chance of recovering, dissipating the effect.	A flaming abyss, a cage of cold steel or another similar barrier surrounds the target.
	Time: Default	Duration: Permanent
Cognitive Genesis	Realized, Intel (A)	An empty space caster can see	Creates an intangible inanimate object that the caster has seen before, and occupies up to TEC/2 empty spaces in any configuration. The physical properties of this object are based on the real equivalent, but it has HP equal to half the caster's maximum HP and 0 AGI for the purposes of damage calculation. The item possesses limited capabilities: Equipment created by this spell cannot grant any benefits to a character wielding it; Damage dealt by these objects when used as weapons are considered the damage of caster's unarmed attack; consumables created by this spell do not grant any effects to its users. Items created by this spell and destroyed by any means disappear completely.	A prismatic mass spawns in the arena and quickly takes shape into the desired object.
	Time: Default	Duration: Permanent
Terrifying Projection	Mind, Fearful, Status, Intel (A)	Any number of targets you can become adjacent to during your movement.	Chance of Fearful: 15+5TEC%. Perform your full movement action while casting this spell.	A hologram of the caster and their Persona, bigger and with a threatening aura, follows the caster.
	Time: Default	Duration: Caster's movement

PART X

BECOMING THE NARRATOR

Stories Worth Telling

This section might contain spoilers for Persona 3, 4 and 5!
If you wish to avoid spoilers, feel free to skip to the Importance of Canon

After perusing this book and possibly following some official stories, you’re likely to have at least one great idea for a campaign, but you might find yourself intimidated by all the new systems and concepts facing you for you and your players.

Players who have no interest in narrating campaigns should avoid reading this section.

The basic rhythm of a Persona story will be familiar to most people: The group discovers the Metaverse, their own power as Users, visits the Velvet Room, uncovers some issue that can be resolved through their new powers and investigates the related Palace, culminating in a climax that resolves the immediate problem and often leaves open threads to expand the story further up until a final confrontation that makes accessing the Metaverse pointless or impossible once it’s surpassed. Most Persona games follow this formula somewhat closely: Persona 3 has a singular Palace with eventual visits to other regions, culminating in the “end” of its Metaverse and the danger it presented to humans, while Persona 4 uses a more fragmented approach with smaller Palaces to tell personal, self-contained stories. Seeing past these differences, the games can be divided into well-defined parts:

1. Discovery: The Users witness an anomaly in the Metaverse and are urged to investigate and resolve the issues as to avoid damage to themselves or others.
2. Investigation: The Users alternate between visiting the Metaverse and learning what they can in the Universe, gradually uncovering necessary clues to progress.
3. Revelation: The party discovers a key element to solve the Palace. This can be the identity of an enemy figure, a Locus or a particular detail of this “cycle”, acting immediately to solve the initial problem.
4. Downtime: The Tyrant is defeated and the immediate tension is lifted from the party’s shoulders. Users are now free to pursue their personal preferences, reflect upon their actions and discover more info on plots that transcend the Palace cycle, such as the overarching Nyx plotline in Persona 3. During this period, the party receives information about a new anomaly, thus repeating the cycle.

You don’t need to follow this cycle closely. Actually, you’re encouraged to experiment with this formula and surprise your players with subtle changes to the game’s rhythm to keep things exciting. Perhaps the next Palace arises while the party is busy with a pre-existing one, doubling the pressure put on the players and shortening their deadlines. Maybe the nature of the Palace is so seemingly obvious that the players bypass investigation, giving you the chance to punish their carelessness. Keeping your players on the edge of their seats and immersed in the story will make the game much more fun to the players and more rewarding to you, the Narrator.

You can tell all sorts of stories with the Grimoire of the Heart. Perhaps you’re in the mood for grandiose plots with worldwide repercussions and dramatic action scenes. Maybe your players would prefer a more subdued and discrete series of intimate stories. Maybe your particular idea doesn’t even include concepts like Tyrants or the Velvet Room. Give all those ideas equal consideration, for the Metaverse is ever-changing, after all, built and shaped by humanity’s unique consciousness.

Similarly, the rules that govern the Grimoire of the Heart are to be molded to the will of those wielding it, being more similar to suggestions than hard guidelines. If a ruling displeases your or your group, you’re more than welcome to come up with your own “House Rules”, letting your players know in advance, to tailor the game to your group’s liking.

The Importance of Canon

Canon means any material that’s officially accepted as part of a fictional universe. Persona 4, Persona 4 Arena and its sequel, Ultimax, are all part of the same canon, all considered official Atlus stories set within the same continuity in a non-contradicting manner. The Persona ~Trinity Soul~ anime is often considered non-canon, as much of its lore directly contradicts the established rules of the “mainstream” Persona series, such as restricting Persona use to teenagers, something that’s proved incorrect in Persona 2: Innocent Sin and Persona 4.

In the same manner, The Grimoire of the Heart tries to keep itself as close to canon as possible, closely drawing from official material and filling the gaps with small explanations and new facts that don’t contradict pre-existing material. Your campaign can be set in the canon of any given Persona material, this book’s or none at all. If a detail of the franchise is not to your liking, you can freely alter or remove it, even substitute it for something else. If you’re narrating to longtime fans of the series, it’s important to notify them of these changes beforehand to avoid undue confusion during the game.

Creating Personae

Inevitably, at least one of your players will leave the task of creating the visuals of their Starting Persona in your hands. Actually, you may find yourself making a group’s worth of designs most of the time. Try not to hold a grudge about it: Creating a campaign-long companion to a player character that can rival designs as striking as Thanatos and Arséne can sound like a hell of a challenge to newcomers. Fortunately, this isn’t nearly as hard as it sounds. As an example, we’ll go through the creative process of one of the first Personae developed for a Grimoire game.

- ❖ Ask for a detailed description of the User, their tastes, aspirations, fears and appearance, as well as their Persona’s Type and spells. Through this, try to find out some of the player’s design preferences.
 - For our example, we’ll use Eichi “Hachi” Hanekawa, a Philosophy student at the Akejiko University. A kind and well-meaning young man who’s always eager to help, Hachi grew as an outsider in his own house as the bastard son of a remarried father and considered a burden for his new family, spending most of his time outdoors, avoiding his hostile home environment.

- The player asked specifically that the Narrator avoid completely human designs, a Persona that would reflect its User's highly efficient and disciplined nature, always eager to solve problems with little delay.
- Hachi was a Physical fighter focusing on boosting his Strength and delivering powerful melee strikes.
- ❖ Research historical figures, gods, saints and monsters whose lore draws connections to the character's backstory. These connections can be obvious, allegorical or simply tangent.
 - It was decided that Hachi's Persona would be Dhatri, the Indian god of health and domestic tranquility, representing that which Hachi sought dearly and found outside his reach.
- ❖ Obtain visual references of the selected Persona. Try to gather from as many different sources as possible.
 - Dhatri has very few visual references available online, representing a male figure with four arms, wearing modest robes and carrying a calm expression. As good of a starting point as any.
- ❖ Exercise your imagination to create a unique, interesting design and with depth enough so that your players are left wondering about the creature's true origin. Kazuma Kaneko, the legendary artist behind many of the Megami Tensei franchise's most iconic designs and much of this very book's visual delights, gave an interview where he revealed the final design of each of his creations has a particularity that he expects will leave a lasting impression upon the viewer and, as demons are born from the human mind, it's only fair that they carry a few modern design hints. Kaneko admitted to searching for inspiration in fashion shows, superhero shows and natural phenomena, incorporating them into impacting, memorable designs.
 - Dhatri was idealized as a war machine reflecting the brutal efficiency of his User: a mechanical humanoid with exposed joints, made of copper and steel. Its "face" made of two meeting, angled metal plates decorated with glowing chevron, similar to Dead Space's Isaak Clarke's helmet, with no human features. Dhatri's "extra" pair of arms is attached to a floating magnetic ring that floats behind the Persona and wield large clubs, improving the Persona's reach. The back of the Persona's body, as well as its feet, is decorated with jets and turbines, making it look more like high-tech war equipment or a suit of futuristic armor.

Rivals, Allies and Confidants

Simply creating attractions in the Metaverse isn't enough: your job as a Narrator extends to crafting charismatic figures to represent some Arcana the players might not. You don't need to necessarily create Confidants to every single Arcana, and nothing keeps you from reusing a few characters between campaigns, but try to use characters that fit the mood and overarching themes of your story. Persona 3, for example, carries heavy themes related to acceptance of death and dealing with grief and has Confidants, such as an elderly couple dealing with the death of their teenage son and a writer whose accepted the shortness of his time on Earth.

Similarly, recurring characters that are not Confidants should also carry memorable character traits, like the stoic Detective Kurosawa from Persona 3 and the impossibly diligent Aika Nakamura from the animated adaptation of Persona 4.

A party's bond with a Confidant doesn't need to be a positive, friendly relation: the strength of these bonds can be born from rivalry, a common goal, the tensely intimate relationship between heroes and villains, or any other story that can unite two or more people.

The small sheets below are a general guideline for you to write down the preferences and progress for each Confidant and an example on how to fill them. Remember: These sheets and the particular amount gained per activity with the Confidant are your responsibility and shouldn't be revealed to your players, to encourage the party to try different approaches and attitudes.

- ❖ Personality: A broad social approach, such as "Flirting", "Professional", "Funny", etc.
- ❖ Gifts: Objects a Confidant would like to receive. Examples include: Collectibles, handmade gifts, and food.
- ❖ Activities: Places and events the Confidant enjoys visiting. You can use the Activities listed in the appropriate section of this book or create your own categories.

Items not listed in the Confidant sheet can grant +1 or +0 Rank, depending on your choice. A Confidant's Rank cannot be lowered below zero. You can gain points in all three classes in the same

Palace Geography

You have a great idea for a storyline and your party of players and Personae are ready and raring to go. Your next challenge lies within the Metaverse: Developing Palaces that can hold the player's attention without being too easy to surpass, but not impossible either. Take a "top-down" approach: Start by the Tyrant, ask yourself what kind of person they are, what effects his actions entail and how they could be romanticized in the Metaverse. For example, a scientist who refuses to allow the results of his research to be used freely can manifest a Palace resembling a museum run by a cruel ringleader that forces those weaker than himself into worshiping his "art". Ideally, the first Tyrant of any given campaign is someone whose actions affect all Users negatively, encouraging them to band together to fight this threat.

Once you've chosen a form and purpose for the Palace, fill it with varied challenges. Your first concern should be the Shadows inhabiting within: Plan combat scenarios that aren't too taxing, but difficult enough to keep your players tense and monitoring their resources, such as Energy, healing items and Arcana Spreads carefully. The next part is a bit more complex, as a Palace must also contain intellectual or mechanical challenges for your players: Present metaphorical challenges or situations that require investigation and wit to be overcome. A good Palace includes several visits interleaved with investigation and direct actions in the Universe, changing the Tyrant's perception to benefit the Users in the Metaverse.

Pay close attention to the time factor: Present a logical deadline to avoid players to get carried away or deliberately stall for the weekly reset of resources to stock on items. Perhaps the Tyrant has something of value to the Users or the players' failure would spell disaster to the group or others. However, give your players enough time for the group to organize, discuss all information presented to them, assemble an action plan and enter a consensus about the Palace's Locus. The Locus should be something that emotionally resonates with the Tyrant: A childhood memory, the reason behind their perverse actions or irrefutable proof of the inherent corruption in the Tyrant's ideals. You don't need to firmly settle for a specific Locus, as you might be surprised by the players' conclusions and realize that their idea might be as effective as yours, or even more so, than your original idea.

Creating Shadows and Tyrants

The bestiary on the next section is more than enough to see you well through several campaigns with enough variety, but perhaps you'll feel the absence of a persona favorite that may not be included in this book, or you may simply want to create new enemies to surprise more experienced players. In that case, you can create brand new designs or use those presented in SMT titles. Pick an appropriate Arcana, up to two Dispositions, up to three Types and buy spells from the list provided, creating new spins on spells to suit any gimmicks you might have planned. A Shadow's HP is calculated differently from the Users' and is equivalent, roughly, to the damage four Users of the same level as the Shadow could deal in four turns, without considering missing or critical hits. The same goes for the damage

Shadows deal: the damage listed in the monster guide must be enough to kill a User of the same level in four attacks, not taking into account players with HP pools considerably above or below average.

Next, come up with Type interactions with relevant Types: Start with one Resistance and one Weakness. Stronger Shadows should have more Resistances, including Null, Drain or Reflect. Remember, not all Shadows need Resistances or Weaknesses... And not all Shadows are built to be a fair challenge, but that's a secret between us Narrators.

Tyrants and Hetelic Actions

Mechanically, a Tyrant functions mostly like a Shadow: It has a HP pool, calculated to be well above the average Shadow's, Combat Skills, spells, and a list of elemental interactions, but with the following features:

- ❖ Tyrants are immune to negotiation: Declaring a negotiation attempt against a Tyrant will simply fail, costing no actions;
- ❖ Tyrants cannot be afflicted with Charmed and Panicked. Additionally, the Stunned Status effect does not prevent Tyrants from casting Hetelic Actions (explained below);
- ❖ Tyrants are immune to all Death Category effects, and effects that deal a percentage of health as damage to a Tyrant deal half damage (Poison, Light spells such as Hama, etc.);
- ❖ Each Tyrant has a list of Hetic Actions, special actions and attacks that make them much deadlier in combat.

Each Tyrant has three Hetelic “slots”, total, and can spend 1 of these slots to activate any of its Hetelic Actions before, during or after any player's actions. These slots are recharged at the start of each of the Tyrant's turns, and slots that are not spent at this time do not carry over.

Hetic Actions exist in two forms: Inserted and Reactive. Inserted actions can be activated at any point between two actions, like Interrupt actions, while Reactive actions may be triggered in response to certain events during the battle. Note that neither of these actions consume the Tyrant's Interrupt allowance. Reactive actions can happen either before or after the “trigger” action's effects. The Hetelic Actions below are not meant to be a thorough list, so feel free to create more depending on your intent for each Tyrant.

Suguru Kamoshida, Olympian medalist in volleyball, working as a Physical Education teacher for Shujin Academy.

Rumors say Kamoshida-sensei sexually abuses the female volleyball team. In the Metaverse, Kamoshida appears as the “king” of the school he views as his personal castle of pleasures.

Asmodeus, the true form of Kamoshida's Tyrant, is a naked, ravenous beast, tethered to the glories of the past, consuming the life of its “subjects” to satisfy his perverted desires.

Inserted Actions

Name	Effect
Revving Up	Tyrant gains the effects of Mind Charge or Power Charge .
Feed on Woe	Tyrant recovers VITd6 HP
Accelerated Casting	Tyrant can cast any spell on its deck immediately.
Tear Down the Walls	Remove all Wall effects on any number of targets.
Wither	One random User gains Weakness to one Type for three turns.
Jet-black Wings	The Tyrant's movement allowance doubles until the end of its next turn. The Tyrant gains the ability to move in any direction through flight.
Wear Down	Each User loses 1d4-1 Energy
Broken Blade	One target is forced to use STR instead of MAG and MAG instead of STR for all relevant checks for the next 3 rounds.
Wrath Unleashed	The Tyrant is healed of all its negative Status effects and is dealt the Enraged Status, being able to automatically fail or succeed its healing checks each turn.
Unstoppable Vanguard	Move the Tyrant on the initiative queue to one spot before his current action, or one spot after. Then, target one other unit and move that unit on the initiative queue to one spot before or after its current action. This Action takes effect on the start of the round after its cast.

Reactive Actions

Name	Trigger	Effect
Runic Shield	Tyrant takes damage of any Type, including Almighty	Tyrant gains Resist against that Type until the end of the next round.
Oppressing Presence	A User rolls to recover from a negative Status effect.	User automatically fails the check.
Mirror Strike	Tyrant takes damage from a basic attack or spell.	Tyrant has a 70% chance to cast a basic attack against the attacker that deals SKLd6 + Lvl. Almighty damage on hit. (SKL means the Tyrant uses MAG or STR, whichever is higher)
Crushing Will	Tyrant fails a check (hit, dodge, Status recovery, etc.).	The result is altered to make the Tyrant succeed in the check, if possible.
Defensive Stance	Tyrant takes damage from any source.	Tyrant gains TECd6 damage reduction against the next damage it receives.
Contract's Clause	A Shadow is defeated, except the Tyrant.	Defeated Shadow is brought back to life with 10% HP and can act immediately.
Run, Cowards!	Any user increases the distance between themselves and the Tyrant by any means.	Tyrant can cast a spell or declare an attack against the target with a +1 TEC bonus.
Thorough Analysis	User changes Persona.	Player receives -2 AGI until the start of their next turn and has their elemental interactions revealed to the Tyrant.
Shatter Shield	The target of an attack is forcibly changed due to the items, spells, Aspects, etc.	The attack deals full damage to the new target and 50% of the original damage is dealt to the original target.
Emergency Rampart	A Critical Hit is confirmed against the Tyrant	Reduce the damage from this attack by 20% and the Tyrant gains Critical Margin +2 for its next attack.

Fighting Users

Inevitably, Users will fight amongst themselves. Maybe the party has an issue with an NPC User, or maybe two players want to fight it out for whatever reason. Encouraging or discouraging Player-versus-player is entirely up to the DM, but you can alleviate the consequences of combat if you so choose.

Users can deal Non-lethal blows by declaring their intent and applying a -1 Penalty to their TEC scores for that hit. If the attack connects and damage would leave the target with 0 or less HP, the User holds back, leaving the target with 1 HP and in mostly stable condition. Finally, at any point, either User can choose to concede as an Interrupt action, ending combat prematurely. Both players and NPCs can refuse concessions, making combat lethal, if need be, although you might want to intervene to avoid players losing their characters for avoidable reasons. If an NPC concedes, consider rewarding your players for their performance.

NPC Users can be built based off a Shadow's stat block for quick, disposable characters. Consider removing the Passive Skills from the Shadow and giving the User a few Feats, weapons and armor to make fighting them a distinct experience. Keep in mind that a party can very easily dispatch of a lone User NPC with default player stats, so plan accordingly.

Aigis

Suppressor-Class User

Level 10

Hit Points: 130

Special Skill: Memories of You – Once per round, as a Quick action, Aigis may switch between Athena and Thanatos, changing spell decks and Interactions.

STR	MAG	TEC	AGI	VIT	LCK
7	5	5	7	5	1

Orgia Mode: Grants +2 STR, +2 MAG, +2 TEC, +2 AGI for 3 rounds. This stacks with other Buff actions. When this effect ends, Aigis suffers Shocked.

Athena's Kiss R: Up to two targets within 4 meters. On hit: MAGd8+AGI (19) Gun damage.

Ranged Mastery (P): If there's an object Aigis can hide behind between her and another User, Aigis gains +1 DDC against that target.

A steadfast Suppressor who played a major role in solving the Tatsumi Port Island incident of 2009. A state-of-the-art fighting machine, Aigis has a strong sense of justice and a kind, nurturing disposition, developed during the year she spent with the Specialized Extracurricular Execution Squad.

Athena

VII – The Chariot

Skill Bonus: +2 STR, +1 AGI

Natural Skill (User): Aegis – Once per combat, when a basic attack or Physical spell is cast against Aegis, inflict HDC -2 on the target until the end of its next turn.

Resist

Weak

Types

Swift Strike: Any number of targets within 6 meters. On hit: STR (7/9) Gun damage, 1d4 times.

Diarahan: Restores 100% of a target's HP. Can only be used twice per combat.

Matarukajaou: Grants +3 STR, +3 MAG to Aegis and all of her allies for 3 rounds.

The goddess of wisdom, weaving and strategy in Greek mythology. Daughter of Zeus, emerging from his head fully armored. Athena is the patron goddess of the city of Athens and wields a shield known as Aegis.

Thanatos

XIII – Death

Skill Bonus: +1 MAG, +1 TEC, +1 LCK

Types

Natural Skill (User): Devouring the Moonlight – Whenever Thanatos is switched into combat by the effects of Memories of You, it gains Critical Margin +2 until the end of the round.

Weak

Reflect

Tempest Hew: 1 target within 10 meters. On hit: STRd8 (31) Physical damage. Critical: Does not deal critical damage. Instead, roll this attack again. Each subsequent attack gains Critical Margin -1, stacking with previous penalties, but can be repeated as long as critical hits are rolled.

Mahama: Any number of targets. Deals 10+TEC% (16%) of the target's current HP as Light damage.

Megidola: 1 target within 8 meters and all combatants within 2 meters of the target. On hit: MAGd10+8 (35) Almighty damage. Can only be cast once every three turns.

The personification of death and mortality in Greek lore, son of Nyx and brother of Hypnos. Thanatos brings a peaceful, sleep-like death, and finds great joy in bringing human lives to their ends.

Playing with Style

Unlike board games and traditional videogames, all you need to start a Grimoire of the Heart campaign is a group of people (at least one Narrator and one player), a copy of this book, physical or otherwise, some blank sheets of paper, a pencil and a handful of dice. Some details, however, can help make the game more enticing and interesting.

- ❖ Character Sheets: You could, in theory, write your character's information in a blank sheet of paper or a notebook, but it's highly recommended that you print out a copy of the character sheets (Section III) for each player to help organize relevant info and immerse the players in the game's world. Wildcard and Beacon Users should think ahead and print out a few extra Persona sheets for Personae they may obtain along the way. Shadow Users may also want a spare Spell sheet for their personal decks.
- ❖ Dice: The Grimoire of the Heart uses die with four, six, eight, ten and twelve faces to carry out actions described within the book. You can substitute this with playing cards, random number generators or any other source of random results within a range, but veteran Narrators recommend a few of each dice category and, in case a given roll requires too many dices, an app or similar tool to automate the process.
- ❖ Calculator: This rulebook uses a considerably high amount of simple percentage and multiplication calculations, which can make manually figuring out each result a bit tiresome and frustrating to players less inclined towards math. Thus, you should keep a calculator handy for the occasions where players really have to figure out how much damage he dealt with his Geas, Mind Charge, Ice Boost, Critical Ymir's Breath.
- ❖ Map: A plain surface divided in rectangles is great to organize the position of each player, enemy and object during combat and other scenes where movement and location are important factors.
- ❖ Arcana Spread: Each User and Confidant represents one of the Major Arcana. Your group should consider using cards from traditional tarot decks or Persona-themed cards to represent each Arcana the players have access to, flipping them face-down once they have been used.
- ❖ Markers: You can use coins, plastic trinkets or small objects to determine the position of players on the map. Additionally, Aspect Points, Death's Door counters, Luck Charges and Perception counters are frequently traded between the party and the Narrator, so it's a good idea to use casino chips or similar generic markers to represent these values, with the added effect of making giving and taking these points a potentially more tense and exciting experience. As several Buff and Debuff effects can be active on several combatants concurrently, consider using these markers to keep track of the duration of each effect.

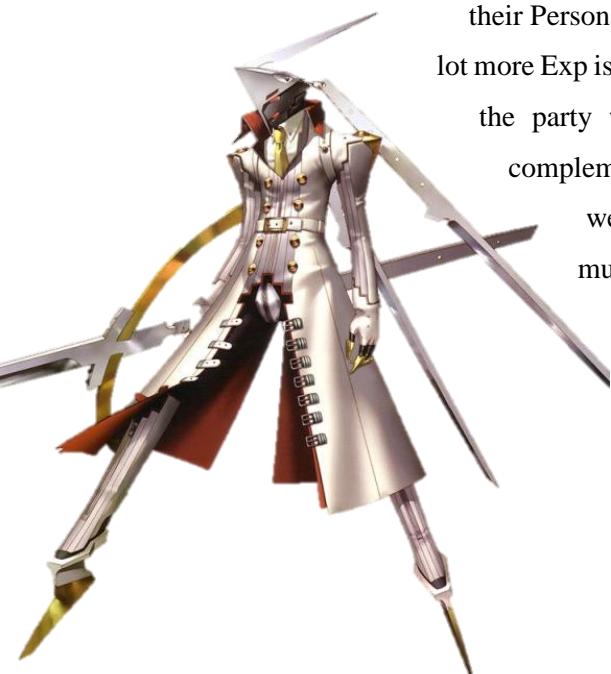

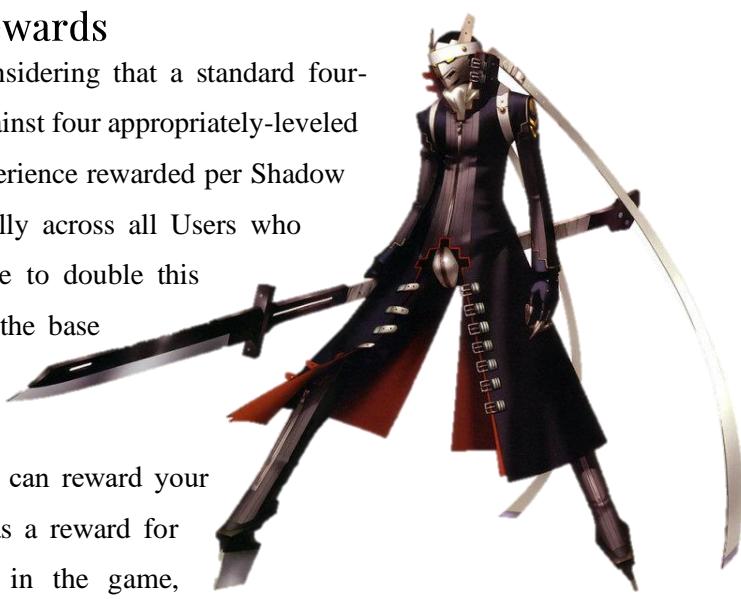

Distributing Experience and Rewards

Experience Point calculations were built considering that a standard four-person User party should go through three combats against four appropriately-leveled Shadows per combat to gain one Level. As such, Experience rewarded per Shadow defeated should be around Lv. * 100, divided equally across all Users who participated in combat. For major enemies, feel free to double this reward. For Tyrants, however, consider multiplying the base experience by 3 or 4, depending on the difficulty of the battle.

However, combat isn't the only activity that can reward your players with Experience. Grant a few extra points as a reward for players who excel at maintaining the immersion in the game, performing feats that make the game more fun and exciting or in case the group figures the solution to a difficult Scene in a surprising manner, but don't reward any one player too often, to avoid a power gap between players.

One of the traditional ways the Persona series uses to rewards the growth of its players, both in power and as characters, is with an Evolution of their Initial Personae to a more elaborate, imposing and powerful form. This change should be done after a relevant event, such as maxing their Confidant, or an event related to the Persona's conviction. Evolving a Persona generally grants them a subtle, but useful improvement in its combat prowess, such as a new Resistance or exclusive skill, besides a physical change that showcases the User's newfound power.

In more advanced campaigns with more powerful, experienced players who already evolved their Personae, Experience will quickly lose its luster as a tangible reward, as a lot more Exp is required to grant them a new level. In that case, consider rewarding the party with a piece of Special equipment. Find an item that would complement the players' playstyle or create one of your own. Special Items were made to be particularly above the average progression curve and must be distributed carefully to avoid making your players too strong. It's wise to never allow your players to own more than a single copy of any given Special item.

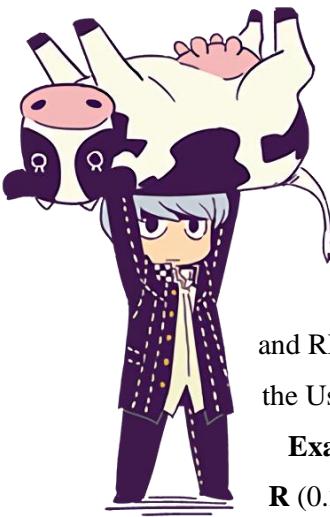

Variant Rules

The rulings presented so far try to keep a strong balance between simple and clear guidelines and robust, comprehensive rulings to cover most situations in a game like traditional Persona entries and, at the same time, not suffocate the players and their creativity with a barrage of unnecessary laws. The rules below are small, optional additions to games that can break the mold of other, “official” Grimoire rules. Feel free to use, change or ignore these as you see fit.

Orgia Mode

This variant is applied to Suppressor Users: Once per day, they can deactivate their violence inhibitors and safeguard protocols and enter a state of frenzy as a free action. Users in Orgia Mode gain +2 STR, +2 MAG, +2 TEC, +2 AGI and can roll one Critical Hit without spending Luck Charges. These bonuses last for three rounds and stack with other Buff effects. At the end of these three rounds, the Suppressor enters a state of emergency maintenance, losing Energy equal to half their maximum Energy pool and causing the effects of Shocked until the start of their next turn. This effect ignores all resistances of target character against Status effects.

Crafting Items

Particularly crafty Users with Discipline Tier I or higher can fabricate a number of common items to aid their exploration of the Metaverse. You can dedicate Time blocks and RP to create items of the Battle Effects and Tools categories. Each Tier in Discipline allows the User to produce up to 0.5 RP worth of items per block.

Example: Elizabeth has Discipline Tier II. During any time block, she can make 2 Kajaclear-R (0.25 RP x2) or 1 Goho-M (0.5 RP x1).

Boost Mode

Based on the eponymous system featured in the Persona Q games, Boost rewards tactical plays and combat awareness. With this variant, if a User rolls a Critical hit or hits the enemy’s weakness, they enter Boost Mode, reducing the basic Energy cost of their next Tier III or below spell to zero. Other costs, such as Aspect Points or additional Energy lowering effects, still apply. The character stays in this mode until the end of their next turn, but the duration is refreshed if the character hits another Critical hit or weakness. Boost is immediately removed if the player is hit by any attack.

All-Out Attacks

Introduced in Persona 3, All-Out Attacks are a powerful attack simultaneously using the entire party's powers, the ultimate reward for a strategy flawlessly executed. Utilizing this ruling, Critical hits and attacks that target a Weakness from the target deals Knockdown. This effect ignores all Status resistances and cannot be avoided, but Tyrants and enemy Ultimate Personae are immune to this effect under normal circumstances.

If all enemies in the current combat are Knocked Down, any valid User can declare an All-Out Attack as long as there are at least two valid Users in combat. All valid Users spend their Interrupt actions to roll the damage of their basic attacks and the sum of this damage is split equally on all targets as Almighty damage. Dodging and Critical Hits are not accounted, but apply other damage multipliers normally.

- ❖ For an All-Out Attack, a valid User is a User who is conscious, in combat, outside Death's Door and not under the effects of Knockdown.

Intensive Training

A useful option for new players in long campaigns, a Velvet Room service allows Users to adjust their Combat Skills to rectify poorly planned stat assignment. In the Velvet Room, each user can spend 1 Time block to remove points from up to five Combat Skills on their sheet to reassign the same amount to a single, different Skill, under the tutelage of notable teachers, and receive hints and new strategies. Keep in mind no Combat Skill can have less than 1 point assigned to it and no more than any 3 Combat Skills can be set to 1. Some teacher examples are provided to help Narrators.

Example: Alice can spend her Afternoon block training with Hachi, the Destroyer, to remove points from Magic, Technique, Agility, Vitality and/or Luck, in any amounts, to add them to Strength. In the following block, she can repeat the procedure with Minato, the Almighty, to adjust her Magic score the same way, or adjust any other Skill with any other trainer.

Skill	Trainer	Description
Strength	Hachi, the Destroyer	A jolly, but focused and disciplined User
Magic	Minato, the Almighty	A silent, calm teenager with infinite potential.
Technique	Ryusuke, the Invincible	A general notorious for his complex strategies
Agility	Liz, the Untouched	An extravagant, bluntly sincere artist
Vitality	Akihiko, the Unshaken	A man with a short fuse and grand ambitions
Luck	Alphonse, the Fortunate	A young attendant-in-training for the Velvet Room

Persona Formations

Certain Personae are grouped by their myths and, when reunited, grant special abilities to their User, known as Formations. For a Formation to be considered valid, the Users must own all the listed Personae, not necessarily as their Active Personae or split evenly amongst all party members. Starter Personae who share the name of a member of a Formation is considered the right Persona for activating the effects.

On top of that, some Formations have a Leader, a particular Persona which benefits from Formations and grants them another powerful effect to whoever has it as their Active Persona.

Name	Members	Effect
Mitama Formation	Ara Mitama Kusi Mitama Nigi Mitama Saki Mitama	Once per day, increase any Social Skill Tier of any ally by 1 until the end of the day.
Heavenly Kings Formation	Bishamonten Koumokuten Zouchouten Jikokuten	At the start of each combat, grants Fortify All (activator's VIT) to an ally for the first 1d4+1 rounds.
Destiny Formation	Clotho Atropos Lachesis	Once per session, this skill's activator can trade their dodge check's value by the equivalent hit checks between any combatants.
Si Xiang Formation	Genbu Byakko Suzaku Seiryu	At the start of each Combat, grant 1 Resistance to any Type of your choice, to one ally who doesn't have any interactions to the chosen Type.
Fujiwara Formation	Kin-Ki Sui-Ki Fuu-Ki Ongyo-Ki	Once per day, activating User can swap the value of any one of their Combat Skills by any other value of any Combat Skill of an ally until the end of the activator's next turn as a free action.
Seraphic Formation	Gabriel Raphael Uriel Michael	At the start of each combat, holders of the listed Personae can trade their Initiative values amongst themselves.

Leader	Formation	Effect
Neko Shogun	Mitama	You can add +2 to all your Social Skill Tiers until the end of the current Scene, once per day.
Norn	Fate	Grants Null Status to you and any other party member as long as Norn is your Active Personae.
Kohryu	Si Xiang	Grants Resist Fire, Ice, Thunder, Wind as long as Kohryu is your Active Persona.
Metatron	Seraphic	Once per campaign, you can spend all your Aspect Points (minimum 1) to guarantee success in all checks where success is possible, until the end of the current Scene.

PART XI

SHADOWS AND PERSONAE

Shadows and Personae

These are some Shadows the players might face during the campaigns. The measure next to each Shadow shows their size in comparison to an average Persona user. Some Shadow attack effects may use the word “Shadow” in their descriptions. Unless otherwise specified, this does not include Shadow-Class Users.

All Shadows have access to a Basic Attack: a projectile of prismatic energy that can be activated if the Shadow is unable or unwilling to cast any spells from its deck, which can be caused by effects like Panicked. This attack targets 1 creature within 5 meters and deals SKLd4+Lv. Almighty damage on hit, unless an effect is stated to change it, such as Sword X.

Disposition and Negotiation

Each Shadow has up to two Dispositions, generic descriptors of how Shadows interact with Users. Characters of any Class can interact with Shadows, but only Wildcards can convince them to become Personae. Upon choosing to negotiate with a Shadow, the player must choose one of their Social Skills and Risk \(Pg. 43\) a d4 or a d6. The result of this test will be compared to the negotiation difficulty in the table below to determine the Shadow’s reaction. If the player picked a Social Skill compatible with one of the Shadow’s Dispositions, the User gains Tier +1 for this negotiation.

	Devilish
	Noble
	Snobbish
	Friendly
	Childish
	Flirty
	Insane
	Chaotic
	Aggressive
	Anthropophagous

- ❖ Failure means the Shadow will refuse any further negotiation attempts and may declare an attack against the User as its Interrupt action.
- ❖ If Nothing happens, the Shadow will still be available for negotiation, but you still spend your action
- ❖ When you gain RP, add RP to your reserves an amount of RP equal to the Tier of the Skill card denoted on the appropriate Level (Tier) field. The Narrator may choose to give you a Gear or Consumable item of that same value instead.
- ❖Wildcard Users gain a new Persona as the highest possible reward, while other Classes gain a Skill Card from one of the Shadows’ Types. This card’s Tier depends on the Shadow’s level, as shown in the Level/Tier column.

Level (Tier)	Failure	Nothing	RP	Persona/Card
1-5 (I)	0 or less	1	2	3 or above
6-10 (II)	1 or less	2	3	4 or above
11-15 (III)	2 or less	3	4	5 or above
16-20 (V)	4 or less	5	6	7 or above

Bestiary

Pyro Jack

I – The Magician

Level 1

Hit Points: 56

Spell Points: 2

Natural Skill: Guiding Light – Add 1d4 to checks related to path finding and navigating in the Metaverse.

Types

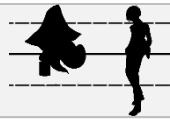

Disposition:

STR	MAG	TEC	AGI	VIT	LCK
1	3	4	3	4	2

Null		Weak

A creature from British folklore. Legends say a witty farmer named Jack managed to trick the Devil himself to keep his soul, but as such act denied him entry into Heaven, he's forced to wander Earth inhabiting a hollowed-out pumpkin.

Agi: A small fireball strikes a target within 10 meters. On hit: Deals 3d6 (10) Fire damage.

Sukunda: A target within 10 meters suffers -1 TEC, -1 AGI for 3 turns.

Resist Sleep (P): Pyro Jack is immune to effects that would render it unconscious.

Sharp Student (P): All attacks against this target receive -1 Critical Margin

Pixie

VI – The Lovers

Level 1

Hit Points: 42

Spell Points: 2

Natural Skill: Sneaky – Grants +1d4 to stealth and hiding checks.

Types

Disposition:

STR	MAG	TEC
AGI	VIT	LCK

Resist		Weak

A Southeastern England folklore creature who inhabits woodlands and are prone to playing tricks on humans. It's said Pixies could have once been humans who fell under a curse or spell. Some sources claim that Pixies are normally harmless, but any person who follows their song into the woods is bound to never return.

Agathion

VII – Chariot

Level 1

Hit Points: 56

Spell Points: 2

Natural Skill: Nagging – You may spend 1 Luck Charge to grant -1d6 to any check of any target you can see, once per check, as your Interrupt action.

Disposition:
Childish

STR	MAG	TEC	AGI	VIT	LCK
4	1	3	3	4	6

Resist	Weak	Weak

Evade I	Weak	Weak

A spirit (or familiar) of Jewish myths who can be sealed within a bottle, ring or talisman. They can bother or torment targets chosen by the caster. They can take any form and are loyal to the human who summons them.

Skull Cracker: A Physical strike that deals 4d6 (13) damage on hit.

Tarukaja: One target within 10 meters gains +1 STR, +1 MAG for three turns.

Mandrake

XIII – Death

Disposition:
Childish, Anthropophagous

STR	MAG	TEC	AGI	VIT	LCK
3	1	4	3	4	6

Weak	Resist

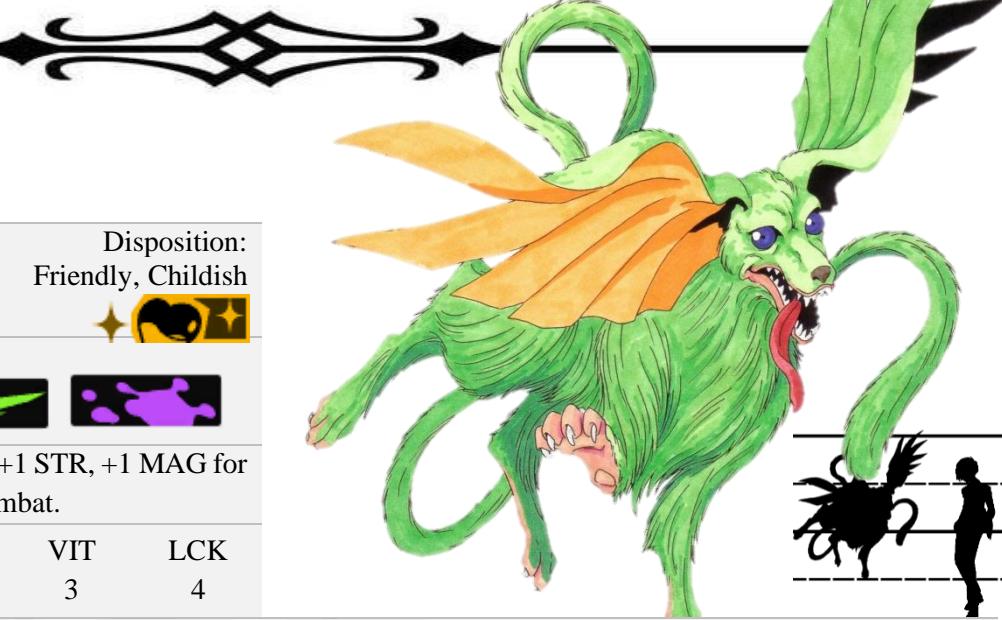

Evade I	Weak	Weak

Scream: The Mandrake emits a horrifying wail that can be heard for up to half a mile away.

Force Wave: Up to 3 targets within 4 meters are struck by a wave of sonic energy. On hit: 3d4(7) Physical damage and applies Knockdown to targets that are Weak to the Physical Type.

Pulinpa: A target within 8 meters has a 35% chance to suffer Panicked.

A legendary, poisonous plant that grows in the graves of guilty men. According to legends, pulling a Mandrake off the soil produces a horrible sound, akin to a child's dying throes, that can hurt or even kill humans in its vicinity. Potions made with Mandrake leaves are capable of incredible effects, such as invisibility or immunity to undead creatures.

Cu Sith

XIX – The Sun

Level 1
Hit Points: 42
Spell Points: 2

Natural Skill: Ushered Arrival – Grants +1 STR, +1 MAG for 3 turns, starting at the fourth round of combat.

STR	MAG	TEC	AGI	VIT	LCK
1	4	4	5	3	4

Garu: 1 target within 8 meters. HDC+1.
On hit: 4d6 (14) Wind damage.

Pulinpa: 1 target Cu Sith can see has a 55% chance to suffer from Panicked.

A giant dog that haunts the Scottish plains. Cu Sith can hunt silently, but prefer to sound off three chilling barks that alert farmers and alert them to lock their women in their homes out of fear that Cu Sith could take them away.

Kodama

Fall from Grace

Infinite Incandescence

1 target within 7 meters.

On hit: TECd12 + TEC (105) Gun damage.

Upon death, Metatron's divine essence coalesces, granting the Users the Megido Fire Special Firearm.

Eternal Punishment: One target Metatron can see loses 50+3TEC% (92%) of its current HP, Light damage.

Manmaon (Light): Any number of targets Metatron can see loses 10+3TEC% (52%) of their current HP. After taking damage, each target has a 10% chance to die instantly.

Guiding Hand: Metatron may use its Interrupt action to force a target to re-roll a dodge check.

Fall from Grace: Any number of targets suffers DDC-1 until the end of Metatron's next turn and suffer a 20+5TEC% (90%) chance of Fearful.

Fire of Sinai: All combatants except Metatron. Does not check for dodge. Deals 30 Almighty damage, and this damage cannot be reduced by any effects.

Infinite Incandescence (P): All Light spells cast during combat lose their upper cap.

Terrifying Projection+ (P): All targets that become adjacent to Metatron have a 15+5TEC% (85%) chance of Fearful.

Hate the Sinner (P): If a Light spell cast by Metatron is Reflected, Metatron's next spell gains the following effect: This spell deals damage based on the target's maximum HP instead of its current value.

Metatron may perform up to four Hetelic Actions per round

Absolute Stance: When Metatron takes damage from an attack, grants TECd6 (49) damage reduction against the next attack.

Obliterate Shield: When the original target of an attack cast by Metatron is changed by the effects of items, movement Spells, Aspects, etc., or if damage is Reflected, the damage deals full damage against the original target, regardless of abilities or resistances, and half damage against the new target.

Accelerated Casting: Metatron can cast a spell of its deck immediately, outside of its turn, without spending its Interrupt action.

Wear Down: Each user loses 1d6-1 Energy.

Elemental Adept+ (P): Can declare the damage Type of all of his skills during casting. Lucifer can choose the Fire, Ice, Wind, Thunder, Nuclear, PSY, Light or Dark Types.

Infernal (P): Starts combat under the effects of Tarukajyne, Sukukajyne and Rakukajyne (+4 STR, +4 MAG, +4 TEC, +4 AGI, Fortify Physical +24 and Fortify Elements +24 for 3 rounds.)

Blade of Pure Evil (P): Lucifer wields Lucifer's Call, gaining its effects and replacing its basic attack. Lucifer grants this weapon to the Users upon being defeated.

Fallen Angels (P): At the start of each of its turns, Lucifer has a 10% chance to summon any Ultimate Persona, except Metatron, into combat. This triggers the Persona's skills that summon other Shadows, if any.

Sermon of the Seven Suns: Any number of targets. On hit: MAGd6 (49/56/70) damage.

Frashokereti: Up to 3 targets Lucifer can see. On hit: MAGd8 (63/72/90) damage.

Antichrist: 1 target within 12 meters. On hit: MAGd12 (91/104/130) damage.

Escathon: Any number of targets within 5 meters. Instantly kills any number of targets under 5TEC% (30%/40%/60%) HP. This spell can be either Light or Dark Type.

The Great Flood: All combatants, except Lucifer. On hit: MAGd10 (77/88/110) Almighty damage. Realized: Destroys all obstacles of the scenery within 8 meters of Lucifer, creating a completely level arena, and dispels all Intel effects from combat. This spell can only be cast once every three rounds.

The chilliest of all rebellious Frosts, its name means nothing in particular. Lucifrost was the most powerful Seraphee under the orders of a powerful King Frost before losing his cool and falling from frozen grace. Sources diverge about the reason of his rebellion, ranging from the refusal to bend the kn(h)ee for humanity to becoming the master of the Frozen Heaven.

Cool Army (P) – At the start of Lucifrost's turn, if there are less than six Shadows in combat, Lucifrost summons Black Frosts (Lv. 13) until there are six Shadows in combat. All Black Frosts summoned by this effect have initiative values equal to Lucifrost's -1.

Popsicle: 1 target Lucifrost can see. On hit: 20d12 (130) Ice damage and 100% Slowed chance.

Double Serve: Up to 2 targets Lucifrost can see. On hit: 20d8 (90) Ice damage and Rakundyne (Fortify Physical -24, Fortify Elements -24, for 3 rounds)

Achoo! Any number of targets Lucifrost can see. On hit: 20d6 (70) Ice damage and instantly kills targets whose HP is below 25%. (this is considered an Ice, Light, Death Category spell).
